'We Want To Stay Alive . . .'

ASSEN (AP) — Captive children chanted "We want to stay alive!" today as South Moluccan extremists holding more than 160 hostages again threatened to kill them if the Dutch government did not meet their demands. A deadline for death passed without apparent incident, however.

Two hours before the deadline at 2 p.m. local time (5 a.m. PDT), several children were brought to the windows of the village school in nearby Bovensmilde where they have been held for two days. They cried out in unison, "We want to stay alive, Van Agt."

Andries van Agt is the Dutch justice minister and the top government strategist in dealing with the gunmen.

Six men were holding 105 children and six teachers in the school. Seven other terrorists, one believed to be a woman, were holding at least 55 hostages on a hijacked train stopped in the middle of open pastureland 10 miles north of here.

Earlier today the Asian militants spoke with senior Dutch officials by telephone. They rejected a government appeal for release of the children and repeated their threat to shoot hostages.

The gunmen, members of an immigrant community from the former Dutch colony of the South Moluccan Islands, now part of Indonesia, were demanding release of 21 countrymen in jail for previous terrorist acts and a jumbo jet flight, with hostages, from Amsterdam to an undisclosed destination.

Some South Moluccans are serving terms in Dutch jails for using political violence in fruitless attempts to force the Dutch government to help them win independence from Indonesia for their homeland.

"If you dare not to meet our demands . . . we will not hesitate or bluff to shoot down a number of hostages for your pleasure," the terrorists said in a letter to Dutch authorities that was released Tuesday.

Justice ministry official Toos Faber said: "The terrorists see the children as their ace in the hole, their safeguard." She described the negotiations, conducted by telephone, as courteous and "businesslike."

The gunmen, who seized the school and train in twin attacks Monday, also threatened killings if mediation was attempted, if authorities did not meet the deadline or if there were reprisals against other South Moluccans.

A leader of the Moluccan community in the Netherlands, Dr. Theo Kuhuwael, a 63-year-old educator and civil servant, began a voluntary mediation effort Tuesday night, but had no immediate contact with the gunmen.

As Dutch voters went to the polls for national elections today, Prime Minister Joop Den Uyl conferred with Van Agt and other key ministers in The Hague.

Officials expressed growing concern for the condition and "mental state" of the young hostages, aged 6 to 12.

A source said at least three were known to be ill and were receiving medication sent in by police and administered by teachers held with the children in a classroom of the school.

Combat police and army troops, along with specially trained anti-terrorist units, ringed both locations. An undisclosed number of specialists from Britain's elite anti-terrorist Special Air Service regiment flew to the Netherlands today to "train and advise" the Dutch, it was announced in London.

BOBBIES GIVE MINISTER BUM'S RUSH

SCARBOROUGH, England (Reuter) — British policemen who normally maintain a sturdy silence and protect officialdom chanted "Get out, you bum!" and jostled a cabinet minister here today.

The target for the jeering chorus was Home Secretary Merlyn Rees who arrived to address a police federation conference.

The delegates, representing the 120,000-strong force, voted Tuesday to demand the right to strike, amid indications of growing anger about pay levels.

They have recently been awarded a five-per-cent rise, half the minimum they wanted.

Youths Gang Up, Rob Man

Saanich police are seeking a gang of youths who attacked and robbed a Richmond man early today in the Red Lion Inn parking lot.

A police spokesman said the man and two companions were confronted by the eight youths, one armed with a knife, when they left the beer parlor about 1:30 a.m.

The victim was knocked known, kicked in the head and robbed of $50.

The other two men were not harmed after telling the gang they had no money. Names of the trio are being withheld.

After taking the money, the eight jumped into two vans and sped off.

Police are investigating the possibility of a connection between the robbery and another incident late Tuesday night when an 18-year-old Victoria youth was picked up in the same parking lot by six men in a van. The youth was beaten up and then dumped near Beaver Lake.

A passing motorist spotted the youth staggering on the highway and took him to Saanich police station.

Cobalt Fire Aid Pledge

COBALT, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government Tuesday declared this town of 2,200 a disaster area and gave an unconditional $500,000 grant to begin cleaning up the rubble left by a fire Monday that destroyed 60 buildings.

Leo Bernier, northern affairs minister, and Rene Brunelle, provincial secretary for resources development, made the announcement after meeting town officials.

Bernier told a news conference, that the province also will more than match money raised by the town's disaster relief committees.

School Boycott Continues

NELSON (CP) — A boycott of schools in South Slocan entered its second week Tuesday as three elementary schools had an attendance of 30 out of 233 registered students.

The boycott in the South Slocan area, 15 miles west of here, began last Wednesday when parents protested the school board's decision to demote Alex Pereverzoff from principal to teacher in area schools.

Pereverzoff is principal of three elementary schools which will be consolidated into a new building in September. The school board hired an Abbotsford man to become principal of the new school.

Neither the school board nor the education ministry plans to take action to end the boycott.

"The ministry takes a dim view of children being kept out of school," a spokesman for the ministry said in a telephone interview from Victoria on Tuesday.

"We're continuing to keep an eye on the situation but the ministry is reluctant to intervene in school board decisions."

Teachers at the three elementary schools have supported the protest by parents in advertisements in area newspaper.

Parents picketed the new school for three days last week and stopped construction.

PM SPIKES ELECTION TALK

Grits Cheer Victory, Tories Grim at Loss

Times News Services

The Liberal party swept to victory in five of six federal byelections Tuesday, maintaining four Quebec seats and taking one away from the Conservatives in Prince Edward Island. Rumors that Liberal sweep would bring a fall federal election, however, were spiked by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The PM cooled election fever Tuesday night in Ottawa by saying he had not been close to calling a general election before the byelections and was no closer now.

Conservative leader Joe Clark insisted his job is not on the line following his party's defeats. But his MPs were grim-faced as they watched the results come in on Commons television sets and his chief Quebec spokesman, Claude Wagner, had no comment on the outcome.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde, however, said the poor Conservative showing indicated that "the leadership of Joe Clerk is already so weak that I'm asking myself: 'What's left?'".

Both he and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said Conservatives will have to decide whether to keep the 37-year-old Clark as leader. The party holds a convention at Quebec City in November and a leadership review is on the agenda automatically.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons following the byelections: Liberals 141, Progressive Conservatives 95, New Democrats 16, Social Credit 11, Independent 1.

Only Temiscamingue riding, which elected Social Credit candidate Gilles Caouette, stood in the way of a clean sweep for the Liberals in Quebec.

Three of the four Quebec seats retained by the Liberals are in ridings which elected Parti Quebecois members in November.

The Liberal upset in Prince Edward Island came in the riding of Malpeque where Donald Wood won a narrow victory over Conservative Ian MacQuarrie, breaking a 25-year Tory stranglehold on the seat.

Liberal candidates won convincingly in the two Quebec City ridings of Louis Hebert and Langelier and the Montreal area ridings of Verdun and Terrebonne.

Although the Conservatives increased their share of the popular vote in the five Quebec ridings to 26 per cent from 15 per cent, they failed to make the showing that Clark expected after extensive personal campaigning in the province.

The Liberal percentage in the six ridings went to 58.5 from 56.6 in 1974 while the Social Credit showing was halved to 8.3 per cent as the party all but disappeared in some Quebec ridings.

Premier Rene Levesque, whose Parti Quebecois ran Robert Bourassa's Liberal government out of office last Nov. 15, said the byelection vote showed the inability of other federal parties to challenge the Liberals in Quebec.

Interviewed during a conference at La Malbaie, Que., Levesque noted the victory in Terrebonne of Roland Comtois, 48, who was trounced by a PQ candidate in the provincial election after resigning as MP to run provincially, but won back his federal seat.

LADYSMITH (CP) — An unidentified man was killed early today in a spectacular crash on the southern outskirts of this community when a semi-trailer truck plunged about 200 feet to the bottom of a ravine.

The body of the driver was trapped in the wreckage.

Bus Fare Hike 'Slap in Face'

B.C. Ferries Corporation director Graeme Roberts said today the decision by Pacific Stage Lines to increase their bus fares 50 cents on the day the ferry rates went down one dollar is "a slap in the face to the travelling public."

Roberts said he will ask questions at the ferry board meeting next week to find out why one government transportation service was raising rates while another was lowering them.

"There is a lack of co-ordination here that concerns me. The premier publicly announces a reduction in the ferry rates and then the bus company quietly raises its rates by 50 cents, which cut the value of the reduction."

A one dollar reduction in ferry rates would have reduced the cost of a Victoria-Vancouver bus ride to $5.25 on June 1 but the 50-cent bus fare increase raises this to $5.75.

In Nanaimo, the home city of Roberts, the cost of a trip from Vancouver to Nanaimo was scheduled to be reduced to $3.95 on June 1 but will, in fact, be $4.45 because of the 50-cent increase in the bus fare.

"This bus fare increase came as a complete surprise to me. We had worked many months for a reduction in the ferry rates and then they raise the bus fares on us."

He said the B.C. Ferry Corporation board of directors could not lodge an official protest because the bus service is outside its terms of reference.

"But we can ask questions. Especially about the lack of co-ordination between government departments."

Roberts said another item certain to be on the agenda for next week's meeting (the date has not been set) is the quality of food on the ferries.

The main problem, he said, is a lack of variety on the menu. There has been some improvement in the service in the past month but there is a long way to go, he said.

The ferry cafeteria has produced a continuing flood of complaints, he said.

Roberts, who had urged the fare for car and driver be reduced to $10.50 from $14, said the reduction to $12 is gratifying but not necessarily the end.

However, the fare question would not be raised at the board meeting, except as it relates to the bus increase.

AREA POLICE PLAN LIE DETECTOR UNIT

A police polygraphy section for lie detection will be established in Greater Victoria in six months to a year, Police Chief Jack Gregory informed the Victoria Police Board today.

Gregory did not say under which law enforcement agency the section would be set up and gave no more details of the proposal, which he said had been relayed to him "in a confidential manner."

The board chairman, Mayor Mike Young, welcomed the news. At the present time a polygraph operator has to be brought over from Vancouver, sometimes by helicopter, and the arrangement is "very expensive," he said.

"I don't think it is unreasonable to suggest that one polygraph operator is needed on Vancouver Island," he said.

U.S. Tourist Boom Seen for Victoria

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

"Victoria is going to get a whole lot of tourists this summer," predicts the executive vice president of the Portland Chamber of Commerce and director of the tourist bureau.

"We have never had so many requests for ferry schedules. It is going to be very busy in Victoria this summer, you can be sure of that," said Oliver Larson.

Larson, in a telephone interview, said the tourist drop last summer was due to a number of factors, none of which are present this year.

"There was the increase in the ferry fares along with the things that were happening down here in Oregon. The economy was bad last year. Nobody wanted to travel very far. Now things are really picking up. I don't know what President Carter has done but I have never seen such mass optimism before. Everybody believes times are getting better."

Officials in Seattle tourist offices also report a flood of inquiries about attractions in Victoria. They project a sharp increase in the flow of visitors to Victoria this summer.

One official of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce estimated the increase could be as high as 15 to 20 per cent, based upon the number of enquiries coming into the chamber office.

Larson said it should come as no surprise that Portlanders are planning to come to Victoria.

"We have taken surveys and Victoria ranks very high as a tourist destination for people in Oregon. In fact, for family trips, Victoria ranks second to California. You know, Disneyland and all that.

"More families go to Victoria than visit Crater Lake Park (which is in Oregon)."

Victoria does not have much of an image as a swinging city, however.

"I must add that Victoria is nowhere on the list for young people. Singles, young couples, the swinging crowd. Their number one choice is San Francisco, followed closely by Las Vegas. If they are going up to Canada they will select Vancouver.

'Tortured' Canadian Freed by Mexicans

United Press International

TORONTO — A Vancouver businessman who claims he was tortured and unjustly jailed in Mexico said Tuesday he plans to press External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson to negotiate a Canada-Mexico prisoner-exchange treaty.

Fred Ostrikoff, 43, who operated a finance company and a winch-manufacturing plant in Vancouver before his June, 1974 arrest, was released from a Mexico City area prison last week after serving nearly three years of a 5½-year sentence for counterfeiting.

He said he had not committed any crime.

Ostrikoff said he will ask Jamieson to begin official negotiations with Mexico on a treaty to allow Canadian prisoners there to serve their time in Canadian jails.

"The whole Mexican justice system is cruel and ugly," he said. "I'm going to see Jamieson on behalf of North Americans wasting away in Mexican prisons, because of violation of human rights."

He estimated there are about 600 North Americans in Mexican jails — most on drug-related charges.

Ostrikoff said he was on a three-day business trip to Mexico when he and a Vancouver business associate, Fred Verigin, were arrested in a Mexico City restaurant.

Following a search of their hotel rooms, plainclothes officers demanded $10,000 to release them, Ostrikoff said.

When they refused, they were bound hand and foot, blindfolded, bundled into a car after nightfall and driven to a racetrack on the outskirts of town, he said.

Ostrikoff said he was stripped naked, punched in the stomach several times and forced headfirst into a water trough until he agreed to sign a statement admitting he had "falsified" Mexican pesos.

"They had my life in their hands — they could do anything they wanted," he said. "They could kill me and I could do nothing, I realized that."

Two months later, Ostrikoff said, he was handed a slip of paper saying he had been sentenced to 5½ years. He said he was never taken before a judge.

"I just broke down — I couldn't believe it."

Ostrikoff told of inmates facing extortion by prison authorities — $500 to avoid 18-hour work details, with beatings the punishment for refusing — poor medical attention and open trafficking in heroin and other drugs unofficially condoned by authorities.

Ostrikoff said his wife and two children will fly to Canada next month from the Philippines where they have been living and, after that, "I'm going to try to live a normal life."

"But I have an obligation to those boys back in the prison."

Family Escapes Tornado

BRIERCREST, Sask. (CP) — The Les Murcoch family took refuge in the basement of their farm home and escaped injury Tuesday night as a tornado whipped its way through their farmyard.

Murdoch said the house and barn suffered considerable damage and several granaries and other farm buildings were destroyed.

Several other tornado funnels were reported in the areas of Avonlea and Briercrest, 20 miles southeast of Moose Jaw, about 7:30 p.m.

Meanwhile, heavy rain in the Lumsden area, 15 miles northwest of Regina in the Qu'Appelle Valley, caused basement flooding and eroded market gardens between Lumsden and Craven. One report said three inches of rain fell on Lumsden early Tuesday evening.

The Regina weather office said more than two inches of rain fell at Wynyard in about two hours.

CBC SUPPRESSING TV DRAMA?

TORONTO (CP) — Denis Harvey, acting assistant general manager of CBC's English-language network, says the company has shelved a controversial drama until next season or later, but denies management is trying to suppress it.

Harvey said in a recent interview that the drama, about Alberta's billion-dollar oil sands project, was ready for telecast in February and has been cleared by corporation lawyers.

Directed by Peter Pearson, the drama has actors portraying Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed and other real-life participants in the project.

Harvey said instead of the drama, the final prime-time periods this season will be devoted to two 90-minute programs about organized crime in Canada and the U.S.

"I can honestly tell you that it boils down to a moral decision about putting conversations into the mouths of real people, some of whom are still in office," Harvey said.

The drama deals with the Suncrude project and the events from April, 1973, to February, 1975, that led to its implementation.

Kenneth Welsh plays Lougheed and Mayor Moore is Frank Spragins, Syncrude's president at the time.

the deadline neared. Reporters were not allowed to approach the school and villagers who live near it were told at police barricades: "If you go through the lines, you won't be allowed to come back out."

At noon, two hours before the terrorists' deadline, Dutch authorities agreed to set up a direct telephone link between gunmen in the school and their comrades aboard the train.

About the same time, a group of South Moluccans from Bovensmilde walked to the school and appealed to the gunmen through a megaphone not to harm the children. There was no response.

A second group of about 30 South Moluccans from other Dutch communities marched to the school to hold a prayer service in front of the building.

"But for family groups, Victoria is very popular.

"The concerns you people have about your prices are exaggerated. Your hotel rates compare favorably with those in Portland."

"Your restaurant prices are a little high. I mean in the places offering sophisticated cruisine. Your dining rooms are charging just a little bit too much.

"The Archie Bunker places, though, are quite good. That is why Victoria appeals to family groups. You can take the family out and get a good meal that children like and it is not too expensive."

He said Victoria restaurants could improve their service and the number of menu choices — he had to try several places last summer before he could get a decent dinner salad.

People going up to Victoria have not been happy about the seven per cent sales tax (there is no sales tax in Oregon) or the premium they had to pay last summer on their dollar. "We Americans are a bit touchy about paying the exchange rate."

"But everyone here will be happy with the new exchange rate. What is it? Four cents? That will encourage people to spend a bit more in Victoria this summer.

"One thing we are promoting is a Walk To Victoria campaign. We are telling people they can avoid the rain dance (the hassle) if they leave their cars at Port Angeles.

"When they arrive on the ferry in Victoria they are right downtown. They can walk everywhere they want to go or they can take a bus or taxi."

lorme polled about 44,400 votes in Terrebonne, but was 9,000 behind Comtois, only 40 per cent of Terrebonne's 105,000 voters turned out.

In Louis-Hebert, a suburban Quebec City riding, Liberal Dennis Dawson, 27, said the results "demonstrate that voters in Louis-Hebert are still federalists, despite the Parti Quebecois vote."

Dawson finished 21,000 votes ahead of Conservative Jean Lavoie, 37, who nearly doubled his party's vote to about 9,300. The Social Credit vote declined to 1,663 from 2,799.

Dawson supporters sang Gens du Pays, a song regarded by some as the unofficial anthem of an independent Quebec. Dawson's victory margin was comparable with the 25,000-vote margin the late Albanie Morin won in 1974.

In Langelier, another Quebec City riding, Mayor Gilles Lamontagne, 58, at 11,600 votes was nearly 8,000 ahead of Conservative Maurice Hamel, 43. Social Credit candidate Sauveur Fradette, who once threatened Jean Marchand in the riding, fell to 600 votes this time, nearly 500 behind the NDP.

Marchand, now a senator, was defeated by a Parti Quebecois candidate after resigning from Parliament last fall to run provincially.

Bryce Makasey, who resigned Verdun to run successfully for the Quebec National Assembly, was credited by an organizer with winning the riding for Savard by getting out Verdun's anglophones.

Weeks 'Just Salesman'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lawyer for Arthur Weeks, a central figure in the inquiry into the trading of shares of companies involved in Grizzly Valley natural gas development, Tuesday described Weeks as "just a salesman" out to sell British Columbia.

Weeks was an aide to Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, but was fired from the post after he admitted trading in shares of companies affected by pipeline development in the northeast region of the province.

The salesman label was given to him as lawyers began their final submissions before the Grizzly Valley inquiry.

Lawyer C. O. D. Branson said Weeks had been told to sell B.C. and to restore investor confidence. Of Weeks' share purchases, Branson asked: "What would you say of a salesman who wouldn't invest himself in what he's selling."

the weather

The rainy weather which was over central B.C. and western Alberta yesterday moved northward into the Peace River region overnight but not before dropping sizeable amounts of rain. For example Williams Lake received a 24 hour total of over 28 millimeters. Sunshine is expected in most of the B.C. interior today and temperatures will be several degrees warmer.

A Pacific disturbance lies about 300 miles off the B.C. coast this morning and is moving slowly eastward. Rain from this system will begin on the north coast this afternoon and on the south coast tonight.

As the disturbance moves inland on Thursday, showers will become widespread over all regions and daytime temperatures will be 2 or 3 degrees cooler.

TANKERS STUDIED

Pollution, trade and energy will be discussed May 27-31 at the 18th meeting of the Canada-U.S. interparliamentary group of MPs, congressmen and senators assembled in Victoria.

One reason for the location is a first-hand look at the potential pollution threat of oil tankers in B.C.-Washington State coastal waters, organizers said today.

The group has been alternately in Canada and the U.S. since 1959 and will break into three groups this time to deal with energy, trade matters including St. Lawrence seaway tolls and investment and environmental issues ranging from coastal pollution to the 200-mile maritime limit.

Shipyards Seek $3.5B Naval Order

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association has called on the government to place orders with Canadian shipyards for an estimated 20 naval vessels worth $3.5 billion in the next 20 years.

The shipbuilding group, representing 21 shipyards with more than 15,000 workers, said in a brief to the federal cabinet released Tuesday that the design and construction of the new fleet should remain in Canada.

"It would be inconsistent with Canada's national objectives to do otherwise," the brief said.

The association said it expects the cabinet will be considering soon the general ship replacement program including various alternative proposals for design and construction.

The brief, outlining the association's proposals for a federal shipbuilding strategy, commended Industry Minister Jean Chretien for increasing the shipbuilding industry assistance program subsidy to 20 per cent from 12 per cent as a temporary measure applying to the March 1-Aug. 31 period this year.

'Backs Against Wall,' Spray Opponents Say

A spokesman for a group opposing the provincial government's planned budworm spraying program said Tuesday the group might be forced into civil disobedience in an attempt to stop the program.

Tom Davis, of the Yale Ratepayers' Budworm Committee, said after a half-hour meeting with Forests Minister Tom Waterland that the group has little alternative left.

"Civil disobedience isn't out of the realm of possibility," Davis said.

"Our backs are against the wall. I don't know what we can do."

Davis said Waterland told group representativies that the decision to spray 52,000 acres of Fraser Canyon forests with Orthene and Sevin-4-oil will stand and the spraying to combat spruce budworm infestation will begin early this summer.

Davis also said the minister said that if the program was successful, there will probably be more spraying.

"It's the start of a project, I'm afraid," said Davis. "I think that our chance of stopping the program is . . . we're in a desperate situation right now."

He also said one of the group's members was ejected from the meeting because of a comment she made.

Davis said Heather Leder, of Yale, was asked to leave Waterland's office when she asked about the influence of chemical companies on the decision to spray.

"I can't help but think there is something we don't know," said Davis.

He said Waterland was upset because his integrity had been questioned.

Davis said the group will continue a publicity campaign against the program. The group has no intention of provoking violence or property destruction.

The meeting with Waterland followed a peaceful demonstration on the steps of the legislature by 17 members of the group. Davis said then that the group has a couple of alternative plans to fight the spraying.

College French Urged by Spicer

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian universities were accused Tuesday of having an attitude "unworthy of a banana republic" by dropping French as an entrance requirement.

Keith Spicer, official languages commissioner, hurled the criticism, then suggested the federal government withhold grants to universities unless the entrance requirement is reinstated.

While most students were required several years ago to have studied French in high school to attend universities, the rule was dropped at most institutions.

Spicer told a Commons committee studying the expenditures of his department the rule was dropped to attract more students. An increase in students, results in larger government grants.

Spicer said universities must reinstate the requirement because they have a responsibility to foster learning of the language.

Spicer said he believes efforts to increase bilingualism across the country and mutual understanding by the two linguistic groups must begin with primary school students.

Thomas Lowers, Progressive Conservative member for Red Deer, said he had taken French in school as a youngster and that at the time there was no prejudice against French Canadians.

The cleavage between the two linguistic groups has since been created by politicians and bureaucrats, said the Alberta farmer.

Jean-Robert Gauthier, Liberal member for Ottawa-Vanier, said that when he was a teenager in Ottawa there was much prejudice by the English against the French.

Gauthier, a chiropractor, said Spicer's office had helped break down the walls of prejudice, but nevertheless, French Canadians outside Quebec still are being assimilated.

While most of the MPs questioning Spicer appeared to favor the work fostered by his office, Benno Friesen (PC Surrey-White Rock) questioned the use of French in announcing train departures from a Vancouver station.

The use of French was not offensive Friesen said, but it appeared unnecessary in Vancouver.

Censors Offer 'Strange Things'

OTTAWA (CP) — "I've heard a lot of strange things here today," commented Mr. Justice Wishart Spence Tuesday as the Supreme Court of Canada began hearing an appeal dealing with film censorship.

His comment came after Louis Lindholm, appearing for the attorney-general's office of British Columbia, argued there are areas of morality where a provincial government can enact laws although the subject matter is governed by federal criminal law.

As an example, Lindholm cited the "standard of morality on a local basis" and said this might apply to the showing of movies not banned by Ottawa.

Judge Spence observed that Lindholm appeared to be arguing that provinces cannot ban movies which are bad but can ban movies that are not so bad. "It seemed strange," said Lindholm, but that was what he meant.

Ontario, Quebec, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia are siding with Nova Scotia in an appeal against a Nova Scotia appeal court decision which said the province has no power to censor films.

If the Supreme Court agrees with the Nova Scotia court, film censorship might end across Canada until the federal government exercises its full powers in the field.

The appeal centres on 43-year-old Gerard McNeil, father of two boys and, at the time, editor of the weekly Dartmouth, N.S., Free Press.

McNeil became interested in a ruling by the Amusements Regulations Board of Halifax which banned the showing of Last Tango in Paris.

The board refused to say why it had banned the movie and McNeil, contending the board invaded federal jurisdiction by finding the movie obscene, took the board to court.

After more than a year of getting court approval to bring his case to trial, the provincial appeal court ruled in McNeil's favor. The Nova Scotia government then appealed to the Supreme Court.

The province argued that the censor board was acting within a legal framework designed by the federal govenment to regulate such matters as to where people could watch movies in Nova Scotia and to ensure the safety of movie house premises.

Constitutional Fire Sale

As the national unity debate unfolds the Trudeau administration seems willing to put more of its wares on the block each day. The prime minister now says he is willing to give Quebec and the other provinces more control over the selection of immigrants if Ottawa can retain a veto in security matters. Talk is cheap at this stage of the most serious game in Canadian history, but the government's newly discovered constitutional flexibility has inherent dangers.

Few Canadians are naive enough to believe that a national accord can be effected today without drastic constitutional changes. Not only will changes be necessary to woo Quebec, but the West, buttressed by the Hall commission and an intuition that its time has come, demands a larger share of the national pie. Ever since the Western Economic Opportunities Conference in Calgary, western premiers have been running around like kids in a candy store demanding new taxation powers and better transportation sawoffs. While many of their grievances are historically justified the country as a whole seems to have lost sight of the lynch pins that hold confederation together. At this point in time Ottawa will offer anything and negotiate later. The premiers, like all politicians, will never refuse added power.

Yet it is difficult to imagine powers of immigration residing in provincial hands. The temptation would be too great for parochial politicians. Remember British Columbia's Bill Vander Zalm's remarks about how he could reduce welfare rolls here if Quebecers needed passports to cross the Rockies? Perhaps that's an extreme example, but don't forget the former New Democratic Party government made a deal with the province's doctors to ship immigrant physicians to the hinterlands for a period of practice. Luckily, the NDP's own Human Rights Branch squelched that rank discrimination. A case can be made that Quebec with a minus birth rate needs special immigration powers to ensure the existence of its language and culture. The same argument makes no sense when it is applied to Manitoba or British Columbia.

In his constant warnings that Quebec would suffer out of confederation Trudeau emphasizies the negative. Ottawa should accentuate the positive if it hopes to win this battle of hearts, minds and economics. Like an unimaginative business in the process of a bankruptcy the government acts as though it is advertising a constitutional firesale. It's easy to sell-out in this manner, but the object of the exercise is to remain in business.

A Lesson Well Learned

That the weekend convention of the B.C. New Democratic Party in Vancouver produced more yawns than it did headlines is indicative of a basic change in party attitudes which may prove critical in the next provincial election. The usual scenario for a major NDP gathering includes a running battle between party leaders and labor unions, a few self-righteous harrangues by the radical left-wing, some outraged posturing by the women's caucus, approval of several controversial resolutions and a continual low-frequency grumbling about party leadership. At the recent gathering at the University of B.C., none of this occurred.

On the contrary, unionists shifted away from the hard line of the B.C. Federation of Labor, which tends to put trade unionism before the party, and were quietly supportive of NDP policy. The more radical party elements, losing strength to a growing sense of cohesion, were less strident than in the heady days of 1973. The women's caucus, which has fought bitter battles with Dave Barrett and other establishment leaders, worked calmly and quietly. Only one controversial resolution — one to prohibit struck companies from hiring new employees — was approved, while another supporting Quebec's right to self determination was deftly engineered out the back door by convention executives. Barrett's leadership role was never questioned as the party leader enjoyed unanimous support such as he had not seen since before the 1972 election.

Reasons for this basic change in convention tone are varied. The party, recovering from its 1975 election defeat, remain chastened. Delegates, generally younger and newer to the convention process, were perhaps more easily manipulated. Radical thinkers, prominent when the party was in power, have realized through experience that they are outside the mainstream of NDP thought.

But undoubtedly the most important factor here is the growing sense of unity and purpose that has gripped New Democrats. Intangible and unspoken, this sense of necessity turned the usual three-ring circus into an efficient, if dull, meeting. Party members appear to have realized that they will never see power again if they cannot stop bickering in public among themselves. The need now, repeated by Barrett, party executives and delegates on the floor, is organization, greater membership and hard work. Lesser issues will simply have to wait.

It is an unlikely parallel, but the weekend convention of the NDP was reminiscent of Social Credit party conventions of 1973 and 1974. In those days, the NDP used to laugh as party president Grace McCarthy crowed about membership figures and the enthusiastic response received on quiet forays into the Interior. At the University of B.C., Dave Barrett talked of similar stumping throughout the province and of the growing ranks of the NDP. The 1975 election, he said, was "a bitter lesson to us all." Barrett, it would seem, has learned his lesson well.

HAROLD GREER

It's a (shhh) Tory Scandal

TORONTO — One of the more fascinating mysteries of Ontario politics is the scandal syndrome. We are allergic to scandal. Politicians are not supposed to talk about it, the media are not supposed to report it, the public is not supposed to hear of it.

Anyone who breaks this unwritten rule is frowned upon and pays a certain price.

Donald C. MacDonald, leader of the CCF cum NDP for many years, bared scandal after scandal in the legislature, and he always had the goos. All it got him was a reputation for snarky mud-slinging.

Ed Ziemba, NDP member in the last Legislature for High Park-Swansea, had the goods when he said medicare payments to some medical labs involved kickbacks to some doctors. Ziemba, at the moment, is pondering whether to go to jail for refusing to say who told him and the general guessing is that he won't get re-elected.

One-time Liberal leader John Wintermeyer proved, to any reasonable man's satisfaction, that organized crime existed in Ontario when the government claimed it didn't, and that the mob had even penetrated the provincial police and government. The Conservative press and most of the voters turned on him in horror; it was a big reason why Wintermeyer lost the 1963 election and his own seat.

Integrity at Issue

Another Liberal leader, Robert Nixon, is generally thought to have blown the 1975 election by questioning Premier William Davis' "integrity" leading to a dust-up between the two on province-wide television and producing thousands of votes for the NDP, which displaced the Liberals as official opposition.

Ironically, Davis went into that election trailing a cloud of scandal behind him. It was the big reason why the Conservatives, 32 years in power at that point, were reduced to a minority government. Both as premier and Conservative party leader, Davis figured prominently in some of these affairs but Nixon, apparently, was not allowed to say this indicated a certain lack of integrity.

The current election is another reflection of the premier's "integrity" or lack thereof. In terms of issues of over-riding public policy, there is no need for it; Davis called it entirely because he and his advisers concluded they had a good chance of getting a majority. In short, the election is an exercise in political opportunism.

This is fair enough, if Davis would only admit it. But admitting it is the last thing he will do; he won't even use the word "majority", although it is popular enough with Conservative campaign workers. Davis insists the election was caused by the pettifidous and obstructionist opposition parties, a thesis that depends not merely on subjective interpretation of facts but on the grossest efforts to deceive.

Knock on any Ontario door where the occupant knows there is an election underway, and the probability is that great resentment will be expressed, with Davis as the target. The fact of the election is itself a major issue of the campaign. But one would hardly know it by listening to the politicians or the media.

This is the scandal syndrome, integrity strain, at work again. One cannot debate the need for the election because inevitably that involves attacking Davis' integrity, which is against the rules. One must not engage in personalities. NDP leader Stephen Lewis doesn't even mention what the election is all about in his speeches; Liberal leader Stuart Smith mentions it but he is quick to get on to other matters. One must, at all costs, be positive.

The same psychology prevailed when The Globe and Mail reported, on May 12, that Disposal Services Ltd., a company seeking government approval of waste disposal sites at Maple north of Toronto, gave $35,000 to the Ontario Conservative Party in 1974, which donation, according to information filed with the securities and Exchange Commission in Washington by the company's American parent, Waste Management Inc., was "a precautionary step taken to insure, to the extent possible, a favorable ruling" from the government.

If Smith had anything to say about this it has gone unreported. Lewis put out a statement which said, in effect, that he didn't want to discuss it.

To be sure it was not much of a scandal in the usual sense of the term. There is no evidence whatever that the $35,000 produced the result intended; one of Disposal Services' applications was approved (the second is still being considered) but leaders of the Maple ratepayers who opposed the sites, and who have followed the government's handling of the matter throughout, are satisfied everything was above-board.

But that is really not the point. The $35,000 was clearly intended to be influential and it was given under circumstances wherein the donor had every reason to think it would be.

The president of Disposal Services in 1974 was Max Soloman, who says he obtained approval from his U.S. superiors after he was urged to make a donation by Norman Goodhead, the current president. Goodhead, who was not unfamiliar with scandal when he was reeve of North York township, has been a Conservative fundraiser for many years. Soloman has told reporters: "I was told to do it and I did what I was told." As to who told him, he said: "That's classified."

The $35,000 was placed in the Conservative party's trust account by Disposal Services solicitors, Goodman and Goodman. According to information filed with the SEC by Waste Management Inc., this was done "to assure anonymity of the donor." The senior partner of Goodman and Goodman is E. A. Goodman, long-time Conservative Party activist and currently Premier Davis' chief political adviser. Distinguishing between Goodman and the Conservative Party is rather like distinguishing between the garden and the flowers.

Commission Named

In short, the point of the Globe story is that it was another revelation of how the Conservative party operates. A cynic might say that, granted there was no bribe, the Tories should at least give the money back, because it was taken under false pretences.

The scandal syndrome requires, whenever there is an outbreak like this, that a Royal Commission of Inquiry be appointed. Premier Davis appointed Justice Sam Hughes of the Ontario Supreme Court the day the Globe report appeared. Needless to say, the commissioner will not be reporting until long after the election is over.

The syndrome also requires a display of outrageous indignation at the very suggestion of scandal. Davis managed this by railing at The Glove for "below the belt journalism." It seems, even though the facts of the story were not denied, that Davis should have been shown the story before publication, in ample time for the Globe to be "dissuaded by any light we might shed on the situation."

Yes, he actually said that. Indeed, he managed to rail at The Globe so successfully that his press conference broke up with two Globe reporters being railed at by some of their colleagues for unethical journalism. Strange, no?

Coast Mission

A Church sponsored project, under the government summer work programme, is organizing the records of the Columbia Coast Mission for the Anglican Church Archives. The Mission was begun in 1905 by the Rev. John Antle to serve the medical and spiritual needs of logging camps on the coast between Vancouver Island and the mainland. Rev. Antle's successors, Allan Greene and later Archdeacon Patrick Ellis, continued to serve the coastal settlements through the use of Mission ships such as the Columbia. Today, the Mission is carried on by seaplane under the joint administration of the Anglican and United churches.

Any archival material pertaining to the Columbia Coast Mission and its staff over the years would be appreciated. Letters, diaries, paintings, photographs, movie film or tape recordings that reflect the activities of the Mission over the years would be important contributions to the archives of the Church. If any of your readers have such materials that they would be willing to deposit for safekeeping in the archives please contact the Archivist, Anglican Synod of the Diocese of British Columbia, 912 Vancouver St., Victoria, B.C. Real Democracy

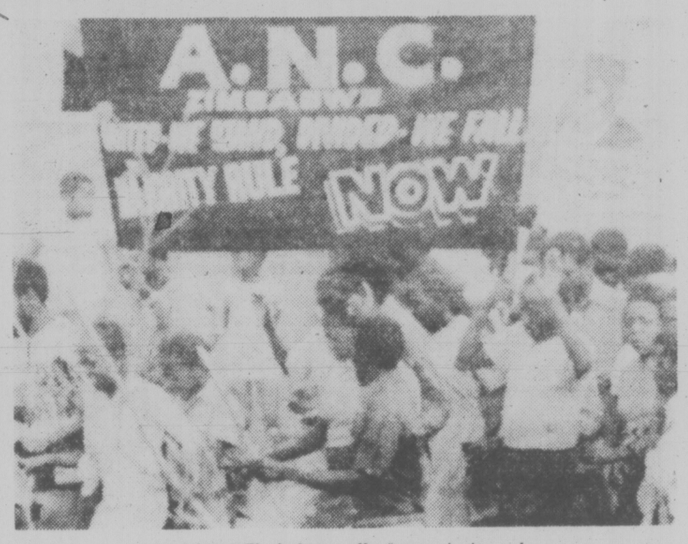
Frankly, I was not surprised when your correspondent, M. P. B. Wrixon, in his 'Independent Schools' letter (Times, May 11) referred to my letter on the same subject as "plain hysteria", "a diatribe" and "just childish". When a correspondent employs emotionally-colored terms such as these to denigrate a letter with which he disagrees, it is often an indication that his own arguments have little to recommend them. In accusing me of claiming that the public schools teach socialism, your correspondent is either ascribing a fake argument to me in order to discredit it, an old trick, or it is proof that he did not read my letter carefully before rushing headlong into print. All I said was, "I suspect that the real reason socialists have always opposed independent schools is because these schools either teach an independence of mind that would find the restrictions of a socialist system intolerable, or else give the child a religious background that may incline it to be hostile to socialism." What I wished to imply was that socialism may have a better chance to breed in a country in which all the children have been subjected to a uniform education and particularly one which has not inculcated any system of moral principles. I do not think that I am mistaken in this belief, for the Waffle Manifesto, that blueprint for a socialist Canada which was signed by no fewer than five members of the recent NDP cabinet, after calling for the public ownership of the means of production, includes the following significant words, "... in any strategy for building socialism, community democracy is as vital as the struggle for electoral success. To that end, socialists must strive for democracy at those levels which most directly affect us all, in our neighborhoods, our schools, our places of work."

It sounds fine, until one remembers that in the socialist lexicon, the word "democracy" has a somewhat different meaning and that Russia, China and East Germany among others, are looked upon as democracies.

To me, your correspondent's loathing of the British independent school system because "it created a class system" (these are his words, not mine) is evidence of his apparent willingness to accept a school system only if it creates a one-class society.

In closing, I would reaffirm my belief that in a real democracy, as normal people understand the term, parents should be given an unqualified, non-socialist, truly democratic freedom of choice, not only freely to choose the school with their children shall attend but to do so secure in the knowledge that they will not be required to pay for their children's education out of their own pockets. — Peter Gage, 250 Douglas Street.



People of Zimbabwe rally for majority rule.

Southern Africa

I have just spent the weekend of May 14-15 in Vancouver at a two-day conference on "Southern Africa, a Time of Change". Why has there been no reporting of this event in your paper? Enough information was disseminated there on the current course of events in Zimbabwe (Rhodesia), Namibia (South-west Africa) and South Africa to glut a columnist's gullet for a week, and yet I witnessed not a scrap of coverage by the Victoria Times.

Why must I keep reading white visitors' impressions of affluent South Africa, and never have the opportunity to hear from the black poor — the 17 million third-class citizens that live in the townships and non-arable "homelands" of South Africa?

I was greatly impressed by the quality and quantity of material provided at the conference. There were speakers representing liberation groups from all three South African countries, as well as representatives from the anti-apartheid movement in the U.K., former political prisoners in South Africa, Bishop Tutu of Lesotho, former dean of the Anglican cathedral, Johannesburg, and many more.

Doubts and fears perpetuated by irresponsible, incomplete reportage of Canadian papers were assuaged by the firm stance on humanitarian goals expressed by all liberation group representatives. (i.e. the patriotic front in Zimbabwe, SWAPO in Namibia and ANC in South Africa).

Let me quote as an example, Callistus Ndlovu, the UN representative of Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU — a part of the patriotic front) who stated very emphatically: "The independent Zimbabwe shall be a democratic republic in which all its citizens irrespective of race, color, or creed, shall be treated equally. What we want for an independent Zimbabwe is one Zimbabwe, one nation."

Please, let us have more honest, rounded reporting than we now receive in our local papers. Let us hear from the majority, the people, and the liberation groups that carry so much of their support; less from Vorster and Smith who represent the interests of racist elites only.

I learned many things this past weekend . . . and alongside knowledge grew resentment that these facts and views hadn't been exposed to me before by our so-called impartial organ of a democratic society — the press. — Alison Inglis, 2924 Graham St.

Socred Decisions

Regarding recent announcements re cutting the ferry prices and expansion of a homemaker program. Admittedly it may appear that this government is starting to come to its senses by doing something that the voters of B.C. want done, but I believe that is the plan: they "appear" to be doing something constructive. Let us first look at the history of two programs. It was the Social Credit government that raised ferry fares by such a drastic amount and now by reducing it 20 per cent admit that they used lack of sufficient forethough.

Let us recall that it was Bill Vander Zalm who cut back on the homemaker program. If he plans to expand on it now, why did he cut back on it in the first place? Again they either do not use enough forethought before they make their decisions or it is all part of a long range plan to make them look like "good guys" as election time draws near.

Any member of the BCMA can tell you how valuable a program the homemaker program is in regards to keeping down hospital costs. For this program provides services for many people who would otherwise have to be hospitalized, and it would cost much more to keep these people in the hospital.

These are just two cases where the government has made a decision, then went against this decision, and they refuse to admit that the original decision was a mistake on their part, therefore it must be part of the plan. But what is the plan? It can't be to improve the tourist industry or to reduce hospital costs or else they would have taken it into consideration when they made the original decision and not raise ferry rates so high and expand on the homemaker program instead of cutting it back.

Let us remember all of these things when election time comes and not be fooled by the few things Mr. Bennett does to make his party appear as though it is working for the people — James Bates, Victoria.

Temptation

As the wife of one of the crew members, I feel compelled to bring to your attention an existing situation concerning the operation of the weatherships from Victoria. With the thanks of the Women's Liberation Movement and the spinelessness and lack of leadership of our politicians, women are given the opportunity to enter the Coast Guard Service that contracts them to a six-week voyage into the void, i.e., the weatherships. With the circumstances attendant upon the nature of the occupation, we have somewhere in the region of 80 men and few (considered at times too few) women. I think the facts of this situation speaks for itself.

In closing, I can state that I trust and honor my husband but would not vouchsafe this attitude after six weeks of sexual deprivation which he is supposed to undergo. — Much Concerned.

Latin America Turns From U.S.

By JOANNE OMANG
Washington Post

BUENOS AIRES—A high American state department official recently summarized the difference between Latin America and other developing regions this way: "You might say that African nations tend to see the United States in terms of a permanent adversary, sort of like a trade union views a big company. But Latin Americans are like the guy who goes to work in the big company sweeping up at night, willing to work his way up to become chairman of the board some day. They're seeing their future in terms of co-operation with us for mutual profitability." But now Latin Americans are seriously challenging this concept; more so with the advent of U.S. President Carter's avowed determination to include respect for human rights in his policy equations.

Increasingly, decision-makers in Latin America are questioning the benefits they thought they were getting from the United states, redefining their own goals and looking around to see where they can get the best deal. No longer is the United States automatically seen as the best possible market for their raw materials or the best possible source of loans and technology. Although decades of buying Made-in USA products and relying on U.S. knowhow, aid and advice have caused Latin Americans to look north, their devotion to things American is superficial.

For all the transistor radios belting out soft drink commercials and American rock music, the less-visible institutional underpinnings and attitudes that support the American lifestyle receive less dedication than lip service in the southern half of the hemisphere.

To the extent that the basic Western European tenets of free expression, good citizenship, saving and investment and public service crossed over to both Americas, they have failed to prosper in Latin America where historical circumstances have differed greatly from those in North America.

The result is that the societies of Latin America and the United States and Canada appear no longer to be seeking the same goals.

North Americans are commonly accused of viewing the "typical Latin American" — a breed that does not exist, according to residents of any Latin American country — as the Indians of the high Andean plateaus: dark, uncommunicative, picturesque, probably barefoot and wearing a funny hat.

In fact, if there were a typical Latin American now, it would probably be a married 19-year-old of mixed Spanish and Indian blood who dropped out of school early and now works a six-day week to support two children and a wife in a rundown urban neighborhood.

For contrary to the stereotype, South America has become an urban society, with 61.8 per cent of its people in cities and the urban population growing at four per cent a year.

People here go to the cities for the same reasons their forebears came to the continent: opportunity, education, a better life for the kids. Leaving behind vast empty spaces and unexplored wilderness that would be a frontier if anyone saw any future in staying, they crowd into city slums.

Jobs are scarce there: Although the continent-wide unemployment rate is officially only 5.8 per cent, according to the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America, the figure is universally understated for political reasons. Furthermore, millions of those counted as employed are actually underemployed, selling candy or shoelaces in the streets. Despite the exploding urban population, some governments encourage large families because huge stretches of territory are underutilized — Bolivia's vast natural eastern pasture, for example, is 90 per cent empty — while people are going hungry.

It all adds up to what the UN commission calls grave poverty for fully 43 per cent of all Latin Americans, more than 110 million people. Yet it would be wrong to assume that eradicating this poverty is the No. 1 priority of government in the region.

Explored first by conquerers who came to loot, not to settle, most Latin American nations suffered through generations of warring rulers and local chiefs whose primary aim was personal enrichment. Later, the winners brought in foreign companies to take out the minerals, the oil, the bananas and the rest, building vast social and economic systems around a few primary products.

Governments were bought and sold like pomegranates, while generations adapted to survive and even prosper at the expense of their compatriots. The poor were simply the losers, rules were for those with no pull and critics were mortal enemies. Only in the last 25 years or so — and only in some countries at that — have social revolutions taken place to combat these conditions.

Economic nationalism has been the main force driving the Latins to reevaluate their relations with the developed world, especially the United States.

But regional efforts at cooperation have foundered on mutual suspicion and advantage-seeking as each country drives to exploit its own natural resources while at the same time becoming self-sufficient and independent of any foreign control.

For all the U.S. preaching about trust and cooperation in development, Latin nations' relations with Washington, with one another and with their own peoples are, in fact, ruled by mistrust.

This is evident in the forests of alleged safeguards bureaucracies throw up around the most minor transactions, to foil a public assumed to be cheating; in the mighty frontier defences and outsize military establishments, and in the wars against guerrillas, the far left and the press that sputter on throughout the continent and occasionally break into the open.

The picture, then, is that of a region whose governments tend to choose calm over kindness, to put their credit ratings ahead of democratic institutions. They apparently would rather that things not work at all than root out the corruption that greases the wheels.

Australia's 'Civilized' Divorce Law

By FOX BUTTERFIELD

CANBERRA — When Tom Steele and his wife decided after five years of unsuccessful marriage to finally get a divorce, all he did was fill out a simple government form attesting that their marriage had "irretrievably" broken down. Within days he got a 10-minute hearing before the local office of Australia's new Family Court. That was it.

"Afterward," said Steele, a thick-set, bearded former sailor, "my wife rang me up on the telephone and said congratulations. She was very nice about it. The whole thing was very civilized, no arguing about who was wrong, no mucking about."

The Steeles' relatively painless path to divorce was made possible by a national no-fault divorce law that came into effect in Australia last year. Under the new decree, a couple need only show that they have been separated for 12 months with no intention of continuing their marriage.

Under the new law it is theoretically possible to get a divorce decree the same day you apply, though in the larger cities there is now a backlog of applicants waiting for a place on the court calendar.

In one instance, court officials in Canberra recalled, a middle-aged woman arrived at 8 a.m. after driving 250 miles from a small rural town. Her husband was in jail for murder, sharing a cell with her son, who had been convicted of another crime. "We felt we owed her something, so we drew up her papers in about five minutes," one clerk said.

The new law is one of a series of social and economic laws passed by the since-defeated Labor Party government of Prime Minister Gough Whitlam during his three years in office, 1972 to 1975. Whitlam also set up national health care and legal aid programs, made university education free nationwide, secured land for Australia's 150,000 underprivileged aborigines and provided large government aid to the arts.

This legislation, though not popular with all Australians, reflected a new era in Australia in the early 1970's, in keeping with the country's tremendous economic growth and improved contacts with the outside world. Boys at Australia's prestigious British-style "public" schools (private in the American sense) still wear school suits and ties, but the country's strict, almost Victorian censorship of books and movies has been ended and Australia's pubs no longer close at 6 p.m.

Although the new divorce law was initially controversial, raising fears that it would further increase Australia's already rising divorce rate, judges, social workers and a number of Australians who have gotten divorced under the act believe it is a major improvement.

"The new law is a humane step forward," said Don McKenze, the national director of the Family Court Counseling Service, which was also set up by the decree. "There is much less tension in the courtroom, since there is no longer any need to prove who was at fault," said McKenze, "and this has enabled people to focus on the real problem, the welfare of the children."

In fact, McKenze reported, about 70 per cent of all couples are now working out their child custody and property settlement agreements without having to go to court, a significant improvement over the old law. An increasing number of them are doing it through the new counseling service, which has been swamped with requests for help.

In turn, this has helped people to cut court costs and lawyer's fees, and perhaps 10 per cent of the people now applying for divorce have been able to complete all the paperwork and other details without hiring a lawyer.

If there is no conflict over the division of property and child custody, applicants have only to complete an 11-paragraph questionnaire, though McKenze still recommends a lawyer — or solicitor in Australia — in most cases.

In a further effort to reduce the usual emotional trauma of divorce proceedings, the new law also provides that judges on the Family Court no longer wear the traditional British-style black robes and wigs.

McKenze said he believed that the new law so far had been predominantly beneficial to women — "all those wives who have gotten tired of having their husbands out drinking all night and can't see anything left in marriage for themselves. There are some bewildered husbands."

But at the same time, he said, there are "surprises in the law for both sides." In settlements arranged under the new decree, children are no longer automatically given to the mothers. Indeed, in about half of the cases they are now going to the fathers, depending on the parents' financial resources, the closeness of the relationship between parent and child, and the father's or mother's personal habits.

The new law, known as the Family Law, also gives children over the age of 14 the right to a voice in deciding which parent they will live with.

"The old meal ticket notion of marriage for women is gone. The chance of marrying a rich man and biting him for alimony is not on," McKenze added, using a popular Australian expression. This change reflects the increasing number of Australian women who work, he added.

In its first year the new law did sharply increase the number of divorces, with the figure rising to 57,839 in 1976 from 24,229 in 1975. But McKenze and others attributed that jump to the initial rush to take advantage of the law by people who had been unwilling to go through divorce under the old laws which required proof of adultery or of various kinds of mistreatment.

My Adolescent Bed

russell baker

Presenting his new designs for bed and bath fabrics in an advertisement in The New Yorker, Oscar de la Renta Says, "My designs are for the woman who believes her bed and bath sould be as well-dressed as she is . . . the woman who makes as much of a personal statement with her room decor as her wardrobe."

I had become edgy about being seen in the company of my bed. It has recently fallen far below my own standards of sartorial elegance, and I was fearful that persons who saw the two of us together might be offended, assuming that the bed was making a devastating statement of my own indifference to good grooming.

This was, in fact, far from the case. I had always prided myself on keeping an exquisitely dressed bed capable of making an eloquent statement of my good taste to anyone who dropped in during my absence. Recently, however, there had been a distressing decline.

Thanks to my experience at dressing adolescent sons, I recognized the symptoms. The bed had begun lounging around in dingy, faded clothes, looking like an unmade adolescent. This was to be expected, since the bed was 14 years old. I would not have been surprised to find a dead salamander in its pillowcase or an empty tube of acne cream under its mattress.

The trail of unsightly dandruff on the pillow and the unrepaired rip in the seats of the sheet where the sharp end of an unsprung spring had once broken the fabric left no doubt what the problem was: Adolescent Bed.

I made the usual mistakes. Coming into its room one night, wearing my finest sharkskin slacks, hounds-tooth check jacket and regimental necktie, I was appalled at the slovenly statement the bed was making. "I am sick and tired," I told it, "of having a bed sitting around this house telling the world I am nothing but a slob. Shape up or ship out."

The bed merely sulked in that infuriating adolescent manner, but as it did not put a record on the phonograph and turn the amplifier to peak volume, I assumed it was ready to listen to reason. "Tomorrow," I said, "You're going downtown and buy a new wardrobe."

Naturally, it did not buy a new wardrobe. When I came home next evening, it had bought a new faded-denim spread which was much too big for it because it had tried on the new spread without bothering to take off its old spread. After that, it had become bored and, instead of buying new sheets, ruffles and pillowslips, had joined a gang of other adolescent beds to spend the afternoon standing on a street corner throwing empty beer bottles at passing cars.

What's worse, it had come home and made a mess of the bathroom, leaving soapy streaks on the shaving mirror and a soggy pile of frayed towels on the bathroom floor. As chance would have it, Oscar de la Renta had come home with me to hear what the bathroom had to say about me, and he immediately left in a huff.

Needless to say, I tried to persuade him that the statement being issued by my bathroom was not my statement at all, but the statement of my bed, which no longer spoke for me. This only compounded my offence. I was having guests that evening, so was unable to proceed immediately with my plan for sending the bed off to a good stern military academy.

Instead, I ordered it to stay in its room all evening and keep the door closed. While dressing in a style that would leave the guests in no doubt that they were dining with a person who gave away nothing in fastidiousness, I was alarmed to discover that my last pair of socks was missing.

"Have you been wearing my socks?" I demanded of the bed. It was ridiculous question, of course, because the bed had quit wearing socks several years ago, but I was in such a rage that I rummaged furiously through its secret hiding places and, lo and behold, found it had hidden all three of my socks under its sheets at its foot. They were entangled with an empty beer bottle and the third volume of Marcel Proust's Remembrance of Things Past.

I was so enraged that I took off my silk suspenders and slashed them across the headboard. One of my guests, a lawyer who had arrived early, bounded in to see what the commotion was about. He immediately informed the bed that it had the basis for a suit.

"You're wasting your time," I said. "It refuses to buy a suit." "That's not what I mean," he told the bed. "The Supreme Court has O.K.'d teachers' beating children, but it still hasn't authorized whipping beds."

The bed has taken me to court. My lawyers urge me not to contest. If the bed takes the witness stand, they tell me, no jury in America will fail to be horrified at the statement it will make.

Long Distance Confusion Warning

New electronic switching equipment currently being phased into use in the greater Victoria area may cause some confusion for persons placing certain long distance direct-dialed calls, according to B.C. Tel.

George Holmes, Tel division customer service manager, says that the installation of the new electronic equipment is to provide Greater Victoria users of the direct dial system with a more efficient grade of service.

"In telephone exchanges where the new electronic computerized installations have been completed, a subscriber placing a direct-dialed long distance call giving the operator a telephone number other than the one from which he is calling, will not have his call completed," says Holmes. "The electronic equipment instantly identifies this situation and rejects the call; a recording will come on advising the subscriber on the proper procedure to follow," added Holmes.

He said a customer wishing to place a direct-dialed call from a phone other than his own and have it charged to his home or office number must place the call through the operator.

TEST on new equipment for Greater Victoria is conducted by Bernie Martin of B.C. Tel.

Funeral Today For Hotelman

VANCOUVER (CP) — Funeral mass was said today for Arthur J. Hamelin, retired taxi company and hotel operator, who died May 20. He was 71.

Hamelin was an Edmonton policeman for 18 years before he went into the taxi and hotel business in the Edmonton area. He moved here in 1952 where he continued his business interests.

Survivors include his son Barry of Toronto and daughters Mrs. J. Sutherland of Lander, and Mrs. R. Christopherson of Victoria.

WITHDRAW EMISSION APPLICATION, PORT MOODY TO ASK B.C. HYDRO

PORT MOODY (CP) — Council decided Tuesday to ask British Columbia Hydro to withdraw its application to increase emissions of sulphur dioxide, particulates and nitrogen oxide at its Burrard terminal generating plant.

At a council meeting, aldermen and city officials spoke against the increases because they feared for public health and property values.

In an application last month to the B.C. pollution control director, Hydro asked for a permit that would allow its plant to emit up to 453,600 pounds daily of sulphur dioxide, 25,956 pounds of particulates and 49,440 pounds of nitrogen oxide.

MLA George Kerster (SC—Coquitlam), said air currents average less than two miles per hour in the Burrard Inlet area near here, while five miles per hour is considered the minimum wind velocity needed for dispersal of airborne contaminants.

Howie Tong, city engineer, said if the increases are allowed, visibility would be severely curtailed, property values would deteriorate and lives could be endangered.

Dave Driscoll, a former Port Moody alderman, said he is mounting a campaign to stop Hydro.

"Hydro is talking about putting 226 tons per day of sulphur dioxide into our air," he said.

But Roger Pitts, chief chemist at Hydro's generating plant, said the proposed emission levels represent "the absolute extreme condition" when all six units are operating at maximum output and fuel is restricted to sulphur-carrying residual oil.

He said the plant has never operated in that fashion in its 15 years of existence.

"The plant very seldom operates. It's a standby, emergency station. Why use it when it's more expensive than bringing water over a dam," he said.

LONG EGG WAR FINALLY OVER

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Arnold Link ended 10 years of struggle against the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board Tuesday by giving away about 3,000 of his hens.

Link said he expected to wrap up the disposal of his assets today. He recently sold an Okanagan egg farm his quota allotment right to have 14,000 birds and produce 200 cases of eggs a week.

There are 30 dozen egs in a case.

Six thousand hens were sold with the quota for a price Link said would pay all his bills accrued in battles with the marketing board during the last decade. Link has argued that interior producers need more protection from cheap egg supplies imported from the lower mainland.

Link is keeping about 500 hens for income and is giving away the remainder on a first-come, first-served basis.

Link limited customers to 20 chickens a family and his farm 10 miles west of Prince George was the scene of a steady procession of chicken-lovers carting away their booty in sacks, bags and cardboard boxes.

Northern Tier Plan 'Deficient'

OLYMPIA (AP) — Northern Tier Pipeline Co.'s application for Washington state permission to build an oil superport has "serious deficiencies," the energy facility site evaluation council has been told.

Jack Christofferson, a Seattle consultant, told the state council that Northern Tier has failed to provide a study of site alternatives and a complete look at the environmental impact of the project.

The Montana-based consortium wants to build a port at Port Angeles, a tank farm in Clallam county and a pipeline from Port Angeles around Puget Sound and east to the Northern Tier states.

The consulting firm, hired by the council, said "a great deal of work" must be done by Northern Tier.

Gordon Conger, the consortium's attorney, said later that the deficiencies were due to the council's adoption of regulations after the application was submitted. The extra information will be submitted before the consulting firm makes its final report to the council June 16, he said.

The council is trying to decide whether to require a formal environmental impact statement before beginning hearings on the proposal.

No Vote Upsets Teamsters

KELOWNA (CP) — Okanagan teamsters union members, who are upset because they weren't given the opportunity to vote on the formation of an interior local, said Tuesday night they will approach the Labor Relations Board to get more say in union activities.

Formation of the interior local was approved by the executive board of the International Teamsters Union following an application from three local union officials.

Jack Vahovlick, secretary-manager of the old local 213, said the creation of the new interior local is an interference with the right of union members.

Four Campuses Seen Impractical by SFU

BURNABY (CP) — A plan to establish four interior university campuses in the province is impractical because the range of courses offered would be too limited, a Simon Fraser University study of the proposal has concluded.

The university's report, prepared by a committee of administrators and professors, says a "distance-learning" system of correspondence courses would be better than interior campuses remote from students.

The university agreed in principle last December to accept responsibility for setting up university programs in non-metropolitan areas as recommended by the government-appointed Winegard Commission.

"The committee has not felt itself bound to follow the Winegard proposals in detail," the committee said in releasing its report last week.

The committee "does not believe that the best interests of the interior can be met by setting up small SFUS at particular locations," the report added.

"In the first place, many potential students are not within commuting distance of these centres and, secondly, the range of courses . . . must inevitably be very limited."

Instead, the report recommends a sophisticated correspondence teaching system backed up by seminars, intensive short courses and tutorials at specific locations.

The committee also recommended that interior programs be linked to community college facilities and local advisory groups to relate courses to local interests.

Wolfe Worried by Inflation

Canada's inflation rate of 7.5 per cent is "unacceptable and dangerous," provincial Finance Minister Evan Wolfe told the Inter-American Accounting Association Conference in Vancouver today.

The rate must be reduced if Canada is going to be able to compete on world markets.

"While for some, the Canadian inflation rates may seem modest, still for a nation that depends so extensively upon foreign trade even these rates are a threat to our ability to trade in international markets," he said.

Wolfe said the British Columbia government would urge Ottawa to continue wage and price controls at least until December, 1978, to keep inflation in check.

Earlier, Premier Bennett had called upon Ottawa to continue the controls at least until October, 1978.

Wolfe said he is convinced controls are helping to reduce the rate of inflation. It had averaged 11 per cent during the two years before controls came in and then came down to 7.5 per cent in 1976.

"The British Columbia government is convinced the anti-inflation program is having a significant effect in curtailing excessive price and wage increases in this country."

At the same time, inflationary pressures could be reduced with greater restraint by governments at all levels.

Free-wheeling spending by governments over the past ten years has fueled the inflationary spiral, he said.

"As chairman of the British Columbia cabinet committee on anti-inflation programs, my concern is to see that the British Columbia public sector lessens its demands upon the province's economy and that the federal anti-inflation program is administered (in B.C.) in the national interest."

Wolfe said the latest B.C. budget showed a spending increase of only 5.9 per cent, compared to a Canadian average of 12 per cent for provincial governments.

Per capita government spending in B.C. is $1,580, about $125 less than the Canadian average, he said. Wolfe said the numbers were taken from eight provincial budgets which had been received in Victoria.

He said financial control measures introduced by the provincial government would add to the checks upon provincial spending.

Therefore, future budget increases could also be expected to be small.

Wolfe said the rates charged by B.C. Ferries and the Insurance Corporation of B.C. before 1975 were "artificially low" and no bargain for the taxpayers in the long run.

Any deficits from these services had to be made up from general public funds which are raised through taxes.

Crown corporations in future will be run on a business like basis keeping a close balance between costs and revenues.

Wolfe made his speech to 800 delegates to the conference at the Hotel Vancouver.

His speech was simultaneously translated into Spanish, which is a major second language at the conference. A text of his speech was made available to the Times in advance of delivery.

Air Canada Looks To a 1977 Profit

MONTREAL (CP) — Measures to cut excess seating capacity and the expected passage of a federal bill revising Air Canada's debt-to-equity ratio will bring the Crown-owned airline a profit in fiscal 1977, says the airline's president.

Claude Taylor told a Canadian Club luncheon that the 38 per cent of total flying cost spent to move empty seats over Air Canada's routes is the "greatest single element of cost."

The highest assured seating capacity the airline can have and still be able to cope with travel fluctuations is 65 or 66 per cent, he said in a later interview.

But the recent elimination of first-class seating on the airline's DC9s will "make a very significant impact" by saving fuel and leaving room for growth without adding new seats.

The federal bill proposing a change in Air Canda's debt-to-equity ratio to 60-40 from the current 98-2 has passed first reading, and Taylor said he hoped it would become law within a year.

Under its provisions, all stock would be held by the transport minister instead of by Canadian National Railways and addiitional shares would be sold to the transport minister in exchange for wiping out the aireline's debt to the federal government.

Taylor termed the proposed merger of Pacific Western Airline of Vancouver and Transair Ltd. of Winnipeg into one regional airline to serve the four western provinces "a good thing."

He said he approves of competition among airlines within Canada, but there is room only for one Canadian-based airline to serve international routes.

'Canada Can Compete'

QUEBEC (CP) — The sale of Canadian-made windshield wiper blades in Japan show that the Canadian auto parts industry can be competitive, the federal minister of industry, trade and commerce says.

Jean Chretien told about 850 delegates to the annual convention of the Automobile Industries Association of Canada "they should not just look at the $30-billion a year American market, but should consider sales possibilities elsewhere in the world."

He said that although the industry has an annual sales of about $1.5 billion and provides jobs for about 100,000 workers, competitive challenges make the industry vulnerable.

Because competition in the domestic market is strong, he sees further consolidation among distributors, noting that already one-half the dollar volume of distributors sales is controlled by larger sales is controlled by larger firms outside Canada.

He warned that because the cost to the consumer of some parts is four times what it costs the manufacturer, there is room for competition.

The Canadian industry also must get involved in research and development or face the possibility of being frozen out of certain markets.

Canada depends on foreign trade and cannot become overly protectionist about imports, he said. Instead, Canadian industries must adjust with changes in world markets.

An Association of Ideas

Financial management is a vital part of B.C.'s economic development.

A prime source of professional accountants and auditors, and a prime resource for this province is the five-year Educational Program of the Certified General Accountants' Association offered in conjunction with the Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration of The University of British Columbia. The program includes the study of accounting, taxation, auditing, controllership, law, organizational behavior, statistics, finance, computers and economics.

Key to the success of the program is the requirement that students obtain intensive practical experience in accounting–finance related positions, concurrently with their studies, in order to blend theory with practical, working experience.

Complementing this is the professional program maintained by association members, which assures the highest possible standards and the most vigorous interchange of contemporary financial methods and ideas.

Today, approximately 3000 students are being professionally trained for a wide range of careers in business, government, industry and professional practice. They are supported by 1350 association members, whose high standards of excellence and continuing interchange of ideas have resulted in the largest professional accounting association in B.C.

Gov't-Financed Golf for Pickersgill?

PICKERSGILL

OTTAWA (CP) — A Newfoundland cabinet minister, the provincial Opposition leader and former federal cabinet minister Jack Pickersgill will soon have a government-financed golf course neighboring their summer homes.

The golf course, and a new access road to the summer homes, is part of a 1972 federal-provincial agreement to establish a national park at Gros Morne on Newfoundland's southwestern coast.

But rather than build the golf course at the Gros Morne site, the Progressive Conservative provincial government chose to have the $1.4-million course laid out 300 miles north on the edge of Terra Nova National Park.

Pickersgill, provincial Transport Minister James Morgan and provincial Liberal Leader Ed Roberts all have summer homes near the same edge of the park.

So does Tom Doyle, a Newfoundland businessman who was the province's recreation minister when the 1972 agreement was signed.

Under the golf-course proposal, the federal government is also to provide an access road that will serve the summer home-owners.

Last week, Prime Minister Trudeau defended proposed construction of the 18-hole course on grounds that it would promote tourism.

John Rodriguez, NDP MP for the Northern Ontario riding of Nickle Belt, has been fighting the golf course, saying it will provide no jobs in economically-depressed Newfoundland and makes a mockery of the federal spending-restraint program.

He told a recent Commons northern affairs committee meeting—considering federal spending estimates for parks — that the golf course will eventually cost the federal government $4 million. Land for the course has been expropriated by the provincial government.

Last week, the Newfoundland legislature approved a unanimous resolution demanding that Rodriguez "withdraw these offending statements and . . . make an unqualified apology to the people of this province."

But at the federal level, opposition MPs have attacked the proposed golf course site, describing the climate as unsuitable—it is often foggy in the area—and the local insect population as vicious.

The original agreement to establish the Terra Nova park was signed in 1957 by former Newfoundland premier Joe Smallwood and Jean Lesage, then federal development minister. There was no agreement at the time to build a golf course.

But when the two governments began negotiating for the Gros Morne park, federal officials say Newfoundland insisted on a federally-financed golf course as part of the deal.

The province then began assembling land near Terra Nova to be incorporated into the park as a golf course.

Economy Talks: Ottawa Cool

OTTAWA (CP) — A call by Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer for a June meeting of federal and provincial leaders to discuss national economic problems got a lukewarm response from the government Tuesday.

Prime Minister Trudeau, asked in the Commons whether he has responded to Schreyer's weekend proposal, simply replied "No."

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said outside the House he would need solid arguments to convince him that such a meeting would have any value.

He pointed to recent federal provincial finance and energy meetings and wondered whether "a further meeting is going to produce anything, even at the first ministers level."

The matter was raised in the Commons by Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party leader, who cited a message Schreyer sent to Trudeau on Friday.

Specifically, Schreyer wanted to discuss job-making measures for next fall and winter, gradual elimination of wage and price controls, the impact of oil and gas price increases on the economy and the financing of a proposed national energy conservation program.

A Manitoba election is expected in the fall.

Ontario Premier William Davis, campaigning for a June 9 provincial election, also called last week for a leaders' meeting to discuss proposed increases in the price of oil and gas.

EASIER UIC PAY URGED

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should be decreasing, rather than increasing, qualifying standards for unemployment insurance benefits in areas where unemployment is especially high, the National Anti-Poverty Organization (NAPO) said Tuesday.

In a brief to the Commons Labor committee Marjorie Hartling, NAPO executive director, said a proposed bill to increase the qualifying period for UIC benefits may cure problems that existed three or four years ago but ignores the problems that exist today.

The bill proposes to increase the current requirement of eight weeks worked to a minumum 10-week period.

Manpower Minister Bud Cullen announced last month that the government would introduce amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Commission Act increasing the qualifying period to a 10-week minimum where the jobless rates exceeds nine per cent and to a maximum 14-week qualifying period where the unemployment rate is six per cent or less.

The jobless rate in Canada rose to a record high of 8.3 per cent in April.

Levesque Sees Quebec 'Jungle'

LA MALBAIE, Que. (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque painted a gloomy picture of Quebec society Tuesday in his opening address to an economic conference called by his government.

"We're up to our necks in this huge contemporary confusion of fickle, unstable societies," Levesque told 130 business, labor and government leaders.

"We're threatened with becoming—and I'm hardly dramatizing—a sort of jungle where the base of any social contract, which is the respect of laws, is diminishing," he said.

Quebec's problems are part of a "social-economic evolution that we share with most of today's societies."

The premier said Quebec had two specific questions, that of language and also Quebec's political future, and asked the participants to limit debate on the two questions.

The premier said the issue of industrial health and safety was a matter of basic concern to all participants and should, therefore, constitute "one of the points of agreement that we should all try to find together."

But he said agreement would be much more difficult to reach in the area of labor conflicts, work stoppages and confrontations of all kinds.

He called upon the participants "to at least make an effort in decreasing the number (of conflicts) and the damages they cause."

In touching upon the need for productivity, he talked about the problems of worker alienation.

"It is in this perspective, to establish a tolerable standard concerning dignity at work, that we are thinking of setting down minimum protection very soon not only for salaries but also for the conditions in which they must be earned."

As for economic recovery, the premier said nothing the government could do would be effective without "a certain degree of permanent mobilization of initiative and resources."

He suggested that Quebecers get to know better the international economic life upon which Quebec depends.

Levesque offered a closer and more attentive government scrutiny of tariffs and monetary policies, and promised new legislation designed to stimulate new investment, particularly in the regions suffering from "industrial anemia."

While he gave no details on the scope of the proposed legislation, he said his government has negotiated a number of economic development agreements with the federal government.

The premier's speech got a mixed reaction from business as well as labor leaders.

FRENCH FEARS

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau likely will be meeting with representatives of French-Canadians living outside Quebec before the end of June to discuss their fears of cultural and linguistic extinction, he said Tuesday.

A report last month by Les Francophones Hors Quebec, a group claiming to represent one million French-Canadians in the nine English-speaking provinces, said they do not have the same rights as their English-Canadian neighbors although the Official Languages Act promises equality to the two languages.

Prime Minister Trudeau said in the Commons Tuesday that he read the report and hopes to meet with the group, which plans to release a second volume today.

Trudeau was replying to Rene Matte, Social Credit member for the Quebec riding of Champlain. Matte had asked what was planned to remedy what he described as the alarming situation detailed in the report.

The report said that in most provinces outside Quebec there is a lack of French schools and French-Canadians are forced to use English when dealing with courts, medical services and provincial governments.

DRUG WITHDRAWN

OTTAWA (CP) — A drug used by diabetics to control blood sugar levels is being withdrawn from the Canadian market, the health department announced Tuesday.

The department says phenformin, marketed under the trade names DBI and DBI-TD, is being withdrawn voluntarily by Arlington Laboratories Division, USV Pharmaceuticals of Canada Ltd.

Phenformin has been associated with a serious complication known as lactic acidosis, which produces nausea, vomiting, or abdominal pain.

A special advisory committee of the Canadian Diabetic Association reviewed both phenformin and a related drug, metformin.

Top UVic Award Won By Saanich Student

Saturday will be a special day for University of Victoria student John Edward Bernard.

That's the day he will mark his 22nd birthday by receiving the prestigious Governor-General's Medal for the highest academic standing among nearly 600 Arts and Science faculty graduates.

He will be presented with the award during the afternoon convocation ceremony at the McKinnon Centre on campus.

Bernard maintained an 8.85 grade point average (out of a possible perfect nine) during the last two years of his Bachelor of Science program in honors physics.

In the faculty of education, two outstanding students will receive the Maxwell Cameron memorial medals and prizes. They are Jane Dewhurst, 32, of Victoria, and Dominque Beltres, of Vernon.

Bernard has in the past received the R. T. Wallace scholarship, a president's entrance scholarship, a B.C. government scholarshp, the president's scholarship (twice), the Don Ingham Memorial scholarship and the Birks gold watch.

A native of Saskatchewan, he attended Colquitz junior secondary and Mt. View secondary before entering UVic in 1973.

BERNARD

DEWHURST

He has accepted a $7,500 scholarship from the National Research Council and will study for his Master's degree at the University of B.C. on his way toward a career in plasma research.

Dewhurst returned to university to finish her degree after four years of teaching. She was the top student in the elementary program.

Her main interest is teaching native children and she has applied for positions in several non-urban school districts. One of her earlier posts was in Rose Prairie, B.C.

Four other members of her family are at UVic, either finishing degrees or in the faculty of law.

Ms. Beltres has spent five years at UVic, and each year was the winner of the Helen Pitt art scholarship. Her special areas are art and French.

She too plans to teach in a non-urban area of B.C.

This year's convocation will be split into two ceremonies to accommodate the number of graduates — 1,023 diplomas will be conferred by Chancellor Dr. Robert Wallace.

12 Victorians Graduate With Record SFU Class

Twelve Victoria area students are among this year's record graduating class from Simon Fraser University in Burnaby.

Canadian writer Margaret Laurence, who will also recieve an honorary doctor of laws degree, will give the convocation address to the 1,000 graduates on Saturday.

Receiving a Master of Arts degree in Economics is Gary John Holman, 535 Agnes; a Master of Arts degree in Psychology will be awarded to David William Hallman of 324-1900 Mayfair.

Receiving Master of Science (Kinesiology) degrees are Simon Chiu, 202-2056 Oak Bay; Robert Arthur Faulkner, 803-360 Douglas and Richard Albert Mansfield, 4058 Haro.

George Adrien Dufour, 619 Transit receives a Master of Business Administration.

Bachelor of Arts degrees go to: Betty Joan Barton, 10850 Inwood, Sidney; Michael James Busby, 2768 Grainger; Michael Joseph Donnelly; Uta Rach, 9667-8th Street, Sidney, and Kathleen Mary Ranger, 976 McKenzie.

Catherine Sue Cardinal, 133 Goward, receives a Bachelor of General Studies.

Chamber Opens Meet Saturday

Topics related to the interaction of government and business will be on the agenda at the three-day annual meeting of B.C. Chamber of Commerce opening Saturday at the Empress Hotel.

The 110 chambers and boards of trade in B.C. are expected to send 150 delegates to the conference, titled Business and Government, to form policy for the coming year.

Keynote speaker will be John Ellis, chairman of the Canadian Development Corp. in Vancouver and a former Canadian Chamber of Commerce president.

Guest speakers appearing on the agenda include Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, Pacific Western Airlines president Rhys Eyton, and Park and Tilford distillery vice-president Hugh Ryan.

Among policies to be set are the chamber's positions on a Kitimat oil pipeline terminal, B.C. Hydro dams, environmental matters, taxation inequities and public funding for private schools.

Student Concert

Three hundred Oak Bay student musicians will be presented in three large concert bands and two stage (jazz) bands at the Royal Theatre at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Most women say they'd prefer a fur coat to a microwave oven.

Until they get a Toshiba microwave oven.

Just try and take a Toshiba microwave oven away from a woman after she's got one in her kitchen.

No way.

We hear views like this all the time. We hear it from our Toshiba home economists who demonstrate our fine line of microwave ovens. And we hear it from the women themselves.

We're not surprised. And we're not surprised that most people who compare microwave ovens, feature for feature, decide on Toshiba.

To start with, Toshiba can offer you everything you've ever wanted in a microwave oven. Things like a 60-minute electronic digital timer. Like a defrost cycle. Like a cook and hold cycle. Like automatic temperature sensor control. Toshiba microwave ovens offer you capacity. Toshiba microwaves are a big 1.5 cubic feet.

As well, Toshiba offers you a wide selection of models at values that are tough to beat. Right now our 766 model is on sale at a special price of about $550.*

And don't forget about Toshiba's exclusive 30-month, in-home warranty. It comes with every microwave oven we make.

Isn't it time you checked out a Toshiba microwave oven?

There's no mess and very little cleanup. You'll get full nutritional value from your food. And with the money you'll pay, you're sure to have some left over to start you on your way to a fur coat.

*All Toshiba products at the retailer's discretion, may be sold at a higher or lower price.

Amusement Park Word To Come Down June 6

Saanich council will decide June 6 what action to take on the controversial amusement park at Vanalman and the Pat Bay Highway.

Ald. Fred Severson, chairman of the lands, planning and housing committee, said today a report by municipal solicitor Doug Patterson was studied behind closed doors after Tuesday's committee meeting.

The full council will study the report before the June 6 meeting.

Douglas Webb of Fun City Attractions Ltd. charged Tuesday that area residents are spreading "uninfomed sensationalism" about the amusement park.

He accused the executive of the Royal Oak Ratepayers' Association of opposing the amusement park without getting the views of the membership.

The matter was referred to the committee after Ald. John Mika earlier accused Webb of misleading council when he applied for a licence to operate bumper and mini cars.

Formula Vee cars are being raced at the track with prize money being offered, council was told.

Association spokesman Peter Montague told the committee lack of information is responsible for the development "being foisted on us."

In sarcastic vein, he said he could not wait for youngsters living in the area to start practising on busy streets for a chance to win the $200 weekly prize being offered by Webb.

Ald. Mary Casilio asked Webb if he would be willing to compromise and close down operations one or two days a week in order to give residents a respite from the noise.

"I can't afford to shut down, but you pay my taxes and I'll gladly do as you ask," he replied.

18 Months For Drug Trafficking

A 32-year-old Vancouver man was sentenced in Victoria county court Tuesday to 18 mosths in jail on two drug charges.

Michael Francis Turpin pleaded guilty May 2 to possession of MDA for the purpose of trafficking and possession of methamphetamine for the purpose of trafficking, in Victoria Sept. 29, 1975.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart, in sentencing him to 18 months concurrent on each charge, said he was taking into account four months spent in custody by Turpin awaiting disposition of his case.

B.C. Credit Tops With Europeans

KELOWNA, (CP) British Columbia's Credit rating on the European money market is excellent, Kelowna alderman Jim Stuart said Tuesday.

Stuart, chairman of the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C., said the authority has just sold $25 million in nine per cent bonds on the European money market.

Stuart said the municipalities neede $45 million for capital projects. He said $20 million in bonds was sold on the Canadian market and the remainder in Europe.

He said the authority will seek markets for a further $40 million to $60 million in B.C. municipal bonds later this year.

He said the municipal finance authority is pleased with the ease with which the bonds were taken up in Europe.

TWO INJURED

Two persons are in fair condition in Victoria General Hospital today after being injured in separate traffic mishaps in Saanich Tuesday.

Robert Sinclair, 21, of 131 Helmcken, suffered head injuries when a bicycle he was riding collided with a car at Interurban and Marigold at 1:24 p.m.

And Andrew Franklin, 18, of 221 Battleford, received broken ribs and internal injuries in a three-car crash at the Trans-Canada Highway and Wascana at 3.24 p.m.

Franklin was a passenger in a car driven by Romano Landucci, 20, of 270 Nicola Place.

Landucci and the driver of one of the other cars, Irvin Nixon, 52, of 523 Ridley in Colwood, received minor injuries and were treated at Victoria General and released.

The driver of the third car, Garth Alton, 27, of 1002 McKenzie, was not hurt.

Campsites Loaded

Provincial parks on Vancouver Isdland and the Gulf Islands were jammed with holidayers over the Victoria Day weekend.

"I have never seen anything like it," said Ron Lampard, superintendent of the Arrowsmith Park District at Parksville. "Campsites at some parks were full by Thursday—a day before the holiday started."

He said there were record crowds at Ivy Green, Englishman River, Little Qualicum Falls, Stamp Falls and Sproat Lake Parks, as well as most marine parks on the Gulf Islands.

There was only one minor disturbance at Sproat Lake Park involving driving at excessive speeds, he said.

Don Carruthers, superintendent of the Malahat District at Goldstream Park, said the park was full over the weekend. Many of the campers were from up-island, he said.

INVENTORS:

They Never Stop Their Quest for... PERPETUAL MOTION

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Perpetual motion — permanent solution of the energy crisis — but unfortunately a myth.

Down at the Bureau of Intellectual Property the nearest thing to perpetual motion are the recurring attempts by otherwise sane inventors to patent perpetual motion machines.

The Bureau of Intellectual Property?

Sounds like government thought control, but it's just another federal inspiration to lump the patent office, trademarks, copyright and industrial design licensing under one title.

Don Campbell, a technical advisory services officer from the bureau, visited Victoria and explained the various services and the wonderful world of inventions.

Despite the fact the laws of physics rule out perpetual motion, people still try to get PM plans patented.

Patent application examiners don't always try to explain the impossibility of perpetual motion, said Campbell. "They say 'just bring us a working model.' It's the only time we ask for a working model of anything."

And it works. The inventors go away and usually are never heard from again.

But inventors are a much maligned lot, says Campbell, and Canadians with their customary reticence have failed to accord their technological heroes with the recognition they deserve.

"Too many people think of inventors as funny little men who work in basements and wear beanies with lights on them," says Campbell.

Today, an inventor may be a highly paid person employed by government or industry, someone who does industrial design work full time or gifted people with innovative ideas from many walks of life.

Over the 186 years since the first Canadian patent was issued, the world has seen a steady stream of useful inventions—and some not so useful — registered by the Ottawa patent office.

Canadians have been responsible for the variable pitch aircraft propeller which helped revolutionize the air transport industry, the ubiquitous power toboggan, the television camera, the panoramic camera, the cobalt bomb, the anti-gravity flying suit, kerosene, carbide, the first practical electron microscope and the rotary snow shovel.

Then there were patents for a reverse cooking stove submitted by a woman in 1855 — the first Canadian woman to be granted a patent — and a 1926 cure-all made from carrots.

One of the weirdest inventions to be granted a patent, Campbell thinks, was a cast iron dirigible which was supposed to become airborne by exhaustion of all the air inside it. But to make it withstand external air pressure it had to be made too heavy to leave earth.

It was one of many concepts for which patent protection is granted but which never saw the light of day. But a far more common reason for new ideas disappearing from home soil is that 90 per cent of Canadian patents go abroad for development — or suppression.

"We are the sort of people who buy insurance rather than investing in factories," Campbell notes.

Because Canadian business is less aggressive and has a relatively small industrial base, multi-national corporations often acquire the rights to new inventions. For example, a new plastic developed by a Canadian subsidiary which used silica to make it light and strong, was considered a breakthrough in the plastics industry.

But, Campbell said, the firm's parent company killed it because it threatened an existing material already manufactured by the firm.

A famous development that helped Canada and the University of Toronto where it was discovered in 1921 has been in use around the world ever since.

That was insulin for the treatment of diabetes. On the patent documents dated Jan. 12-15, 1923, are the names of Frederick Banting (later knighted for his work), Charles Best and J.B. Collip, who shared in the invention of a process that would render animal-derived insulin safe for humans.

The form assigns the rights to the University of Toronto which has licensed insulin for manufacture everywhere. It also shows that patent fees in 1923 were a total $35. Today the same document would cost $350.

Campbell, an engineer, was one of 170 patent examiners drawn from the ranks of chemists, physicists and engineers who screen each application exhaustively. They find no shortage of original thinkers, and a fair amount of unoriginal effort.

There are often visitors to the patent office who say they want to look at patents, without any elaboration.

Campbell said they obviously have never been there before and have no idea of the extent of the patent commission's filing system, so the staff tries to break through the secrecy barrier and finally are able to concentrate the search on a particular area.

And frequently they are able to show the prospective patentee his idea is far from an original conception.

"Sometime they go away very discouraged," Campbell said.

People never seem to tire of some ideas.

"There must be 120 different kinds of sealer lid and bottle cap remover among the patents."

They can also reflect the degree of economic prosperity. Home canning devices were big before the Second World War when times were hard and money short. Then they faded with post-war prosperity and now are coming back with unemployment and the trend to conservation.

Coal-handling devices are another example. They were very big until coal fuel was supplanted by oil and for 30 years there were almost no patents granted for coal machinery.

Today, along with new ideas for wind-powered electrical generators, the patent office is back in the coalfields.

A major objective of the department of consumer and corporate affairs is to raise the awareness of Canadian business, particularly small business, to technological developments that will help them in the marketplace.

Campbell said the Bureau of Intellectual Property also tries to protect unsophisticated business from invention hustlers who take advantage of new ideas, products and processes.

There have been a number of improvements introduced since the bureau came under the direction of consumer and corporate affairs. But the name was a bit hard to swallow.

"When we were first tagged with it we almost choked," Campbell said. "We are not a reichsministry of propoganda, nor do we sell real estate to intellectuals.

"Patents, trademarks, copyright and industrial design registration are all established (to provide inventors and others) with defined rights in law for the products of their intellect."

And getting it done is easier than ever. Since last fall it has not been necessary to go to Ottawa to get a patent or to deal at long distance with a patent attorney.

Patent applications may be filed at regional offices of the consumer and corporate affairs department in Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax.

But it still may take up to 30 months — perhaps longer in special cases — before applications are thoroughly screened.

B.C. to Seek U.S. Ferry Continuation

The provincial government will pressure Governor Dixy Lee Ray to continue the Anacortes ferry beyond the cutoff date of January, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said today.

"The onus is on the Washington State government to continue their ferry service," she said.

"They have a responsibility to their own citizens and to the people in Sidney."

McCarthy, head of the provincial department of travel, was commenting on a decision Tuesday by the Washington State Toll Bridge Authority to cancel the Anacortes-Sidney run in January.

In the meantime, they also decided to switch to the 100-car ferry the Evergreen State to replace the 160-car vessel, Kaleetan, which will be used on a Puget Sound route.

The unanimous decision by the authority was a compromise between Governor Ray, who wanted the service ended June 18, and a number of protest groups, including the B.C. government, who wanted it continued indefinitely.

The six-month delay was a partial victory, Mrs. McCarthy said.

"This will give us a breathing space to return to the question without the emotions of an early deadline. This will give groups in Washington State time to make their case forcefully to their own governor. I believe the onus is on them to continue the service and I am hopeful they will take a second look."

Sidney Mayor Dick Leigh said the unanimous vote by the toll bridge authority "looks pretty final." He said only the British Columbia government could continue an adequate service when the Washington State ferry service is dropped.

Sidney Chamber of Commerce president Hank Vissers agreed.

In Anacortes, Lon Rydberg has formed the Puget Sound Navigation Co. Ltd. and has made inquiries about the costs of leasing the B.C. ferry Queen of Tsawwassen.

'Backs Are Up' On Civic Front

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Touchy relations between municipal employers and employees have been further strained by reports of proposed salary increases averaging about seven per cent for non-union staff at Victoria City Hall.

The added tension comes at a time when plans are being made for further talks between six locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

A tentative agreement on the increases for 26 non-union people was hammered out last Thursday at a closed meeting of city council's personnel committee.

City manager Jim Bramley said today the average increase for the group is 6.97 per cent.

A CUPE spokesman said the union members' "backs are up" because they have been told by GVLRA negotiator Carl Anshelm that six per cent is the maximum allowable this year.

Bramley said the non-union agreement will be put to council in the form of recommendations from the committee.

If accepted the increases would be 6.23 per cent for department heads, 7.46 per cent for deputies, assistants and professional employees and eight per cent for confidential secretaries.

However, Bramley said a clerk typist, a member of the inside workers union which has settled with the GVLRA, received a total increase of 8.96 per cent.

This consists of a basic six per cent allowed under the federal guidelines plus 2.96 resulting from the folding in of a cost-of-living allowance.

Members of the City Hall outside staff have been offered 8.29 per cent, he said, based on the flat six per cent plus 2.29 from the folding in of COLA.

Anshelm said today the guidelines take into account the employee's salary experience over the past two years. He said the non-union people were merely catching up to the CUPE members.

He said the CUPE workers made an average 44 per cent increase in their salaries between 1974 and 1976.

Ald. Larry Ryan, chairman of the personnel committee, said today the proposed increases to the non-union people were legal but he wasn't happy with them.

He said he will look deeper into why the group didn't get what they were allowed under the guidelines last year.

He said he doesn't regard the proposed increase as firm because they have yet to be approved by council. No approval will be given until the CUPE contracts are settled, he added.

Bob Cunningham, spokesman for the CUPE locals' joint bargaining committee, said the employees' backs are up because the employers preach restraint and yet hand out such large increases to non-union staff.

"The administration takes the cream and the workers get what is left over," he said.

The joint negotiating committee met Tuesday and decided to have mediator Ed Sims arrange further meetings with the GVLRA. A meeting has been planned for Monday.

Where Do You Find Seclusion?

Secluded camping spots are becoming hard to find because of significant increases in wilderness camping on the West Coast Trail between Port Renfrew and Bamfield, Lloyd Brooks, deputy minister of recreation and conservation, said Tuesday.

Brooks, who took a small group of scientists camping on the 45-mile trail over the Victoria Day weekend, said once isolated beaches along the trail are now extensively used.

He said it reflected the increase in the number of people who have switched from "car camping" to wilderness camping.

"A few years ago only a few Canadians and Europeans would be found camping on these beaches," he said.

He took his group to what he thought was a secluded beach about four miles south of Pachena Bay, near Bamfield.

"The downhill access from the trail is difficult and we thought we would find no one there," he said. "But to our surprise we found 35 people camping on the beach."

The Barkleys Keep On Shuckin'

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

DENMAN ISLAND — Ma Barkley brought the kids over from Union Bay on the holiday weekend and they did pretty much what the oyster-shucking clan expected.

Len finished first, breaking his last year's record, thereby establishing a "world record"; sister Pat fooled brother Ken, (second last year and winner two years ago), knocking him back to third. Ma (Barb) Barkley was fourth.

The other competitors at the Denman Island World Championship Oyster Shucking contest were really shooting for fifth spot because once the Barkley family starts shuckin', there's no one in the world can touch 'em.

Twenty-one-year-old Len, a professional shucker for Sowcap Oysters Co. in Union Bay, actually shucked fewer oysters than last year when he separated 62 bivalve molluses from their shells.

But last year he wielded the razor sharp oyster knife a trifle too quickly and nicked (culled to the pros) 12 of the chubby squish, leaving a net total of 50.

"I decided to go a little slower this year, and I guess it paid off," he said before picking up his $100 cheque.

A little slower, but not much. Len pried open 61 oysters in the five-minute period without nicking any.

Although he claims there is no fraternal rivalry, Len said he was a little surprised his older brother Ken fell to third with 53 shucked (also no culls).

"He started work at an auto body shop. I guess he lost his touch."

Sister Pat has been improving steadily each year and her 56 shucked, one cull, for 55 total was a strong second place.

Pat works for Mac's Oysters of Fanny Bay.

Like winning son Len, mother Barb works for Sowcap. This year she whipped open 47 oysters with two culls for a 45 and fourth-place finish.

What's it like to bring in that first place cheque?

"Yeah, it's pretty nice. It'll buy a lot of beer."

Speed, precision and a degree of caution are needed to pry open the strongest of the bivalves. West Coast oysters are big, and they clam up tightly when someone wants them open.

The special oyster knife must be inserted in the convoluted edge between the shells far enough to get some leverage but not so far it cuts the meat.

The knife is carefully scraped along one half inside the shell to cut one muscle to make the shell pop open, and then it's simply a matter of running the knife under the other muscle and dumping the treasure into the bucket.

That first step is crucial. It takes a fair bit of pressure to get the knife in, and although there were no mishaps this year, there have been festivals where a rubber glove full of blood has been a competitor's only trophy.

Bystanders ring the competition platform and cheer their favorites while chewing on juicy oyster burgers with tartar sauce, or barbecued oysters wrapped in bacon slices.

Even those who profess not to like oysters are tempted during the Denman festival.

It may have been a brave man that ate the first one, but on the May 24th long weekend on Denman, everybody digs in.

Oyster shuckers, when they're not in high speed competitions, can still turn them out of their shells at a pretty fair clip.

The oyster-shucking machine is yet to be invented, so theyre all hand-shucked. Back at the Union Bay plant, Len says he hand-shucks 20 to 25 gallons of oysters a day.

At about 120 oysters to the gallon, that's slipping the old oysters out at a rate of 300 an hour.

Trial Ordered for Ex-ICBC Man Charged with $5,950 Fraud

A former Insurance Corporation of B.C. employee has been ordered to stand trial on charges of defrauding ICBC of $5,950.

Judge William Ostler made the order following a preliminary hearing in provincial court Tuesday.

Randy Alexander Haughey, 27, now residing in Manitoba, pleaded not guilty when he appeared in court Feb. 9 charged with two counts of fraud.

The charge alleges he defrauded ICBC of $2,800 on March 11, 1976 and $3,150 on April 22, 1976.

Haughey, who is free on $5,000 surety bail, elected trial by judge and jury.

He was represented at the hearing by Victoria lawyer George Jones.

Ask the Times

Q. Can you please tell me the difference between a copyright and a patent? G.S.

A. In Canada a patent is granted by the government to an inventor to protect his invention from sale, manufacture or use by others, and an invention is described as any new an useful process, machine or matter, or improvement thereto. Its valid life is 17 years, non-renewable. A copyright is intended to protect on behalf of the author any original literary, musical, dramatic or artistic work for 50 years beyond the life of the author. In addition, Canada licenses industrial design of products intended to convey an esthetic effect, for five years renewable for five years. And also granted is exclusive use of a trademark for 15 years, renewable each 15 years indefinitely.

Full Study Promised On 'Plan' Viewpoints

Saanich municipal planner Gil Laurenson says he hopes the community plan will be approved in principle by council this year although it may be fall before any amendments are placed before aldermen.

All views of residents, whether written or made at the four public meetings held on the plan, will be studied, Laurenson said.

Before reporting to council possible changes, Laurenson said he and members of his staff will also consult ratepayers' groups.

All aldermen were briefed on the plan before it went to the public. At the last public meeting, however, Ald. John Mika said he had "grave reservations" about it.

Laurenson says he wants everybody to be satisfied with the document before a public hearing is called.

He says further examination is needed on the proposal to allow buildings in the southern part of Saanich to be converted to duplexes without public hearings. This proposal was strongly opposed at the public meetings.

Ald. Fred Severson, chairman of the lands, planning and housing committee, concedes "there is a touch of discrimination" in the proposal.

"I'm concerned about this aspect of the plan; we have to be fair with all of our citizens," he said.

The Price Is Right—Camosun

Camosun college officials are pleased with Greater Victoria school board's decision to lease them the Mount View school campus for a token $1 a year.

"It's an important first step, but there are still a number of decisions to be made before it is finalized," Camosun president Dr. Grant Fisher said today. "But we are very pleased they made that decision."

Camosun rents part of Mount View, but as part of a consilidation program to consolidate to three the seven scattered campuses, the college needs to expand into the rest of the former high school on Carey Road.

School board officials were considering a rent of about $60,000 a year, but the ministry of education, which would have to pay the rent for Camosun, balked at certain aspects of the rental figure whcih the ministry felt comprised a double-payment by the provincial government.

On Tuesday, school trustees decided the public has paid for the facilities to be used for education, and since the Mount View campus is not needed by the school district, a token rental would be in order.

FISHER

The first case will be for three years.

Fire marshal and safety regulation renovations still have to be carried out, but Fisher is hopeful the government will provide those funds now the rental problem has been resolved.

Jogger Identified by Another Policeman

A second policeman identified a 22-year-old man in county court Tuesday as the jogger who picked up a paper bag with close to $10,000 in it Jan. 29 in Saanich.

Constable Doug Morrison was testifying in the fifth day of the kidnap-extortion trial of Ronald James Kellington and George Earl Storry, also 22.

Asked if he was able to see the jogger in court, he said "yes, I certainly am," pointing out Kellington.

Kellington, formerly of 3440 Seaton, and Storry, formerly of 1544 Bank, are accused of kidnapping Cheryl Adele Muller, Grant Muller and Deanne Muller with intent to hold them for ransom.

The trial has heard from 25 witnesses and the prosecution is expected to close its case today after two more witnesses are called.

Morrison told Judge Montague Drake he received a phone call from Colwood RCMP at his home at 6:30 p.m. Jan. 29 and went directly to the police station.

He and another policeman left there by car at 6:48 p.m., parking on Brunswick Place and observing a service station at Tillicum and Trans-Canada Highway.

Shortly after 7 p.m., he said, Muller and two policemen arrived by car and parked at the service station.

He said he saw a male person with long blonde hair in a phone booth near the parked car and another male person run from the rear of the service station and disappear south on Tillicum.

Morrison and the other policeman drove down Tillicum and he said he saw a man with long blonde hair and a red sweat top running south on Tillicum, cutting into the townhouses behind the service station and meeting another person at a stairwell.

The police did a U-turn, did not see anyone at the stairwell, went north on Tillicum to Cadillac Avenue, then returned south on Tillicum to Sims Avenue and saw Muller's car parked with Muller placing an object beneath a telephone pole with a street light on it.

Morrison said he took up observation in a nearby front yard with a pair of night binoculars.

He said he then saw the same man he had seen running earlier on Tillicum, with red sweat top and blond hair, jogging on Sims.

He said the man, whom he identified in court as Kellington, picked up the package left by Muller, opened and closed it, and put it under his left arm, running off on Sims Avenue and disappearing.

He said he next saw Kellington the following morning when police burst into a rented basement suite at 3440 Seaton and arrested Kellington and Storry.

Morrison said he found a red sweat shirt, blue sweat pants and white running shoes in a bedroom where he found Kellington.

He said the last time he saw Kellington the previous evening was around 7:15 p.m.

Earlier in the trial, Sgt. Ed Kokoska, in charge of the general investigation section of RCMP Colwood, said he saw Kellington pick up a paper bag which Muller had left beneath the street light on Sims Avenue.

Before The Judge

Paula Lorimer, 30, a former part-time box office cashier at Memorial Arena, was fined $500 and given six months' probation Tuesday in provincial court for theft over $200.

At a hearing last month, court was told that Mrs. Lorimer admitted taking $400 from the Memorial Arena cash register, although an estimated $6,000 was missing.

Court was told Tuesday that Mrs. Lorimer had reimbursed the arena with a certified cheque for $400.

Mrs. Lorimer was described as "an excellent wife and a good mother" who had made a "great mistake."

The offence and the investigation had caused her emotional stress, court was told.

Judge William Ostler told court that an absolute discharge for Mrs. Lorimer was "absolutely unthinkable." He said it was "a very grave matter indeed" for a person in a position of trust to "stoop" to theft.

The Crown did not press for a jail term for Mrs. Lorimer, but did suggest that "at the very least, probation is required."

The sentencing of 19-year-old John Edward Cauldwell, 7390 West Saanich Road, who pleaded guilty last month to two counts of indecent assault, was moved forward a week by Ostler.

Cauldwell was charged in connection with an April 2 incident near Tolmie Park in Saanich which involved two girls aged seven and nine.

He was released last month on $1,000 surety bail by Judge Harold Alder on the condition that he not be in the presence of any minor without an adult present.

Cauldwell had been pronounced fit to stand trial after a forensic psychiatrist examined him early last month.

A 38-year-old Delta man who pleaded guilty last month to theft of a travel trailer from a trailer sales lot was sentenced Tuesday to two months in jail by Judge Ostler. Alden Sagmoen told court last month that he was drunk when he stole the trailer.

Pat, Billy Make Mike Forget Reg

By The Associated Press

Pat Kelly and Billy Smith are putting Jim Palmer's mind at ease — and that spells trouble for Palmer's American League foes.

"I guess I was fairly negative or I was waiting to have it proven," Palmer said after leading Baltimore Orioles to a 2-1 victory Tuesday night over Milwaukee Brewers with a 12-strikeout, seven-hit performance.

Palmer was referring to remarks he made during spring training about the Orioles' loss of Reggie Jackson, Bobby Grich and pitcher Wayne Garland, all of whom played out their options last year and signed with other teams.

"I had my doubts," the righthander said. "Things didn't look real good. But we had so many guys coming up, you figure a couple of them had to come through."

Kelly, who had a 19-game hitting streak snapped by Milwaukee's Jerry Augustine, 5-5, is batting .326. Jackson, who signed a multi-million-dollar contract with New York Yankees, is hitting .252.

Smith, a second baseman, is batting .269, six points better than Grich, who signed with California Angels.

Palmer, 6-3, posting five of his strikeouts against the Brewers in the final two innings, including a game-ending whiff of Charlie Moore with the bases loaded.

In other American League games, Cleveland Indians downed Seattle Mariners 7-5, the Yankees edged Boston Red Sox 6-5 and California nipped Detroit Tigers 2-1.

Jerry Reuss won his first game after five successive losses as Pittburgh Pirates downed New York Mets 5-2 in National League play.

Elsewhere in the National League, St. Louis Cardinals defeated Philadelphia Phillies 8-5, Montreal Expos edged Chicago Cubs 5-4 in 13 innings, San Diego Padres nipped Atlanta Braves 4-3 and Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Houston Astros 4-1.

Hunch Pays Off And Jets Erupt

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg coach Bobby Kromm played a hunch Tuesday night that led to the key goal in the Jets 12-3 romp over Quebec Nordiques to force a seventh game in the World Hockey Association final.

Kromm sent left-winger Bobby Hull onto the ice alongside Bobby Guindon and Fran Huck early in the second period. Moments later, Hull scored to give Winnipeg a 5-3 margin.

The Jets took command at that point and scored seven more unanswered goals.

"I have these hunches at times," said Kromm. "I didn't know Hull was going to score, but then he's always dangerous when he's out there."

The win gives the Jets a chance to successfully defend their title Thursday night in Quebec.

The game was televised on a delayed basis on the CBC and Thursday's game will also be televised. However the WHA and CBC have not yet announced whether it will also be delayed or whether it will be live.

"We played our game to night, we forechecked, skated well and took the man out," said a pleased Kromm. "I think the difference was we didn't let J.C. Tremblay get away with those cute moves of his."

The Jets so effectively checked the veteran Quebec defenceman that he was on the ice for 10 Winnipeg goals.

Quebec's first two goals, by Real Cloutier came with Winnipeg defencemen caught up ice. the third, by Chris Bordeleau, came with the defenceman disorganized.

Winnipeg, however, stole the puck three times from Tremblay to score and added a fourth on a two-on-one break.

"We just didn't play hockey tonight," offered Quebec coach Marc Boileau, who was ejected from the game for comments he made to referee Bill Friday in the third period.

"The Jets were as good as we were bad. That was not the Nordiques team you saw tonight, we weren't skating and we weren't hitting."

Boileau was upset with Friday who he suggested was intimidated by the boisterous Winnipeg crowd. He also said three of the Winnipeg goals were offside.

"The circus was in town 10 days ago and they forgot to take one of their clowns with them," said Boileau.

"He tells my guys they can't do anything. It's tough to play our style consistantly with a joker like Friday out there. He should rent some television time and a few seals and go put on a show."

Friday issued 13 minor penalties to Quebec and six to Winnipeg. The Jets scored three power-play goals.

In direct contrast to the 8-3 whipping they took in Quebec Sunday, Winnipeg did most things right Tuesday as they scored a playoff record 12 goals.

As well, three players, Hull and Anders Hedberg of Winnipeg and Cloutier scored their 13th goals of the playoffs to tie another record.

Hull had three goals for Winnipeg while Bobby Guindon, Hedberg and Peter Sullivan each scored two. Singles were scored by Dan Labraaten, Mike Ford and Willy Lindstrom.

CLAREMONT LEADS IN ISLAND MEET

Greater Victoria-champion Claremont is off to a good start following the first day of competition in the Vancouver Island track and field championships on home turf Tuesday.

Claremont has 62 points while runner-up Mt. Douglas has 39. Victoria High and Esquimalt are tied for third with 32 points each.

One of the highlights of the opening day was the boys' 3,000 metres race. Randy Cox of Victoria won in nine minutes, 6.6 seconds to edge Tony Theriault of Esquimalt, who turned in a time of 9:08.2. Doug Moffat of Claremont was third in 9:11.5.

Other victories were recorded by Tracy Wilkinson of Claremont (javelin), Gail Thompson of Mt. Douglas (high jump), Nick Bennett of Victoria (triple jump), Matthew Arrott of Shawnigan Lake (hammer throw), Liz Hollands of Cowichan (discus), Cheryl Matthews of Esquimalt (3,000 metres) and Mark Britner of Oak Bay (shot put).

The remaining finals were scheduled to wind up earlier today.

Kevin May Not Play In Test With Rocks

It could be the first of the season's "big game" series for both Victoria Shamrocks and Nanaimo Timbermen in Memorial Arena at 8 tonight.

Reasons for the "biggie" label on the Western Lacrosse Association contest are several:

1—The sometimes-bitter rivalry that has long existed between the two clubs.

2—Several scores left unsettled following the current campaign's first clash between the two clubs, won 13-10 by the Shamrocks at Nanaimo.

3—Timbermen displaying former Victoria junior scoring ace Kevin Alexander in his first game "at home" during his first year in senior competition.

4—Nanaimo players a little more angry and determined than usual since they will be attempting to end a five-game winless streak.

Naturally, Kevin and his two brothers — Frank and playing-coach Ken Alexander — would normally be planning to make life miserableta for the Shamrocks.

All this would be fine for Nanaimo except for the fact that Kevin Alexander is still on the limp because of torn ligaments in his foot and brother Frank is suffering from rib injuries. Both are doubtful starters.

And just as naturally, the Irish have no intentions of being humiliated, especially after their last outing when they appeared to have a decision over Vancouver Burrards in the bag and then blew a lead in the final period.

One way or another, it could be an interesting boxla evening.

For it all, the Shamrocks will probably make at least two player changes. They will have Peter Rushton and Gordie Neilson back in the lineup, but they will be missing the services of Glen Neuman, Mike Beaulac and Dan Green, who are still suffering from injuries.

Despite their five successive defeats, the T-Men have the league scoring leader in Brian Evans, who has collected 12 goals and 16 assists for 28 and holds a one-point margin over Dave Litzenberger of Burrards.

Ron MacNeil is the top Irish sniper with 10 goals and 11 assists for 21 points while Ivan Thompson and Charn Dhillon each have 18.

Dave Evans of Burrards leads the goalkeepers with a 7.48 goals-against average while Victoria's Larry Smeltzer is second with a 9.95 mark.

Walther Out, Puterbaugh In

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bill Puterbaugh was reinstated on Tuesday as driver of car No. 16 for Sunday's Indianapolis 500, after Salt Walther stepped aside.

Walther's father George and brother Jeff purchased the Eagle on Monday that Puterbaugh qualified last Sunday in 28th position from Lee Elkins, an ailing Kalamazoo, Mich., sportsman who said he was no longer physically capable of "running the team right."

The Walthers then announced that Salt, who was bumped from the field as too slow in his own car and unable to qualify a backup machine either, would replace Puterbaugh.

The reason given was "business considerations." The sponsors of Walther's original two-car entry transferred their interest to the new car.

"I had nothing to do with the whole thing," said Salt in a telephone interview from Westchester, N.Y., Tuesday evening "I appreciate the thoughtfulness of my father and brother to purchase the Elkins car for me.

"But I thought about it all last night. If I took the ride away from Bill, I would lose respect for myself. I can't be proud about it, so I figured the only fair thing to do was to turn the car over to Bill and help him in any way I can to make our car successful in the 500."

Puterbaugh, who had been considering legal action until Walther stepped down, said: "It's my understanding that I'm going to start the race and finish the race in the car. I would accept the ride under no other circumstances."

Meanwhile, the qualifying success of Janet Guthrie posed a problem for Speedway-owner Tony Hulman, who gets things officially started each day with the command "Gentlemen, start, your engines."

Guthrie, who is in the middle of the ninth row, in the 26th position, after qualifying Sunday with an average speed of 188.403 miles an hour, is the first woman driver in the history of the Indianapolis race.

Taking notice of a rumor that Hulman didn't intend to change his famous command in that it still applied because it is really the mechanics who start the motors. Guthrie said she was going to have Kay Bignotti start her engine.

"I strongly feel my presence should be acknowleged," the 39-year-old Guthrie said.

Among others who qualified over the weekend was the veteran Formula 1 driver, Clay Regazzoni. Rain prevented him from making the grid in the Monaco Grand Prix so he flew back to Indianapolis, where he crashed spectacularly in his first attempt to qualify for the 500.

The field also includes two Canadian drivers, Cliff Hucul of Prince George, who averaged 187.128 mph in his qualifying run and is on the outside of the ninth row, and former Edmonton-driver Eldon Rasmussen, on the inside of the 11th, and last, row, with his qualifying 185.119 mph average.

Entry Deadline Thursday For Times Tennis Tourney

It's the last call for fun on the courts.

Players who have let time slip by without submitting entries for the annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament are reminded that the entry deadline is 5 p.m. Thursday.

This is the tournament designed to provide additional interest for tennis buffs who play mainly on public courts. Those who are members of private clubs or players who compete with public-courts teams in the Island Tennis League are not eligible for the Times tourney.

In addition to providing competition, the event also enables contestants to become acquainted with players who normally swat the ball on courts in other areas.

On the tournament schedule are singles events for boys and girls and three open contests — women's singles, men's singles and mixed doubles.

Although the tournament is open to those who reside in any part of the Capital Region District, all matches must be played on public courts in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

Following the entry deadline, a committee headed by professional Ian Brady, rankings chairman of the Vancouver Island Tennis Association, which co-sponsors the tourney with the Times, will make a draw for each event.

A postcard will be mailed to one of the players involved in each match, notifying the player of the opponent. Cardreceivers will be responsible for arranging a mutually-acceptable time and site for play, for supplying tennis balls and entering the results on the card and mailing it back to the Times.

Tournament play will continue through the summer with semi-finals in all events scheduled at Henderson Park on August 20. Finals will be slated the following day on the same courts.

No entry fees are charged, but all who wish to participate must submit entries by the Thursday 5 p.m. deadline, either by mail or by delivering a completed entry form to the Times.

An official entry form is printed below. All that is needed for fun on the courts is to fill it in and get it back to the Times before the deadline.

Israeli Comeback Sinks Canadians

HAIFA, Israel (CP)—Canada lost a seven-point lead in the final ten minutes and lost its first Intercontinental Cup basbetball game to Israel 84-80 Tuesday.

It was Canada's first Intercontinental Cup match compared to Israel's fourth. Israel is leading the tournament with a 4-0 record.

Canada led 39-38 at the half and dominated play until the final minutes.

As late as 80 seconds from the end of the game Canada had a three-point lead but a series of turnovers and several misses at the foul line cost them the victory.

Canada was led by Jim Zoet who scored 23 points. Peter Ryan added 11.

Lions Trade Eric Guthrie

VANCOUVER (CP) — General manager Bob Ackles of the British Columbia Lions Tuesday announced that a trade has been completed with the Montreal Alouettes sending quarterback Eric Guthrie to Montreal for Canadian defensive back Glenn Leach.

Leach played the last six games of the 1976 season for Montreal after having been drafted in the fourth round of the Canadian Football League draft. He is 22 years old, five-foot-eleven and weighs 185 pounds. He attended Wilfred Laurier University at Waterloo, Ont.

It's Okay in Baseball

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Human Rights Commission has ordered that girls be allowed to play on boys' baseball teams.

The order follows a hearing last month into the case of Debbie Bazso, 9, star player on the only baseball team in Waterford, a town of 2,000 people just north of Simcoe.

The commission ruled that league play is one of the public services in which the Ontario Human Rights Code bans sex discrimination and that the exception on the grounds of public decency doesn't apply.

The hearing was told that when coach Brett Bannerman tried to register team members for last year's provincial playoffs, the Ontario Rural Softball Association refused Debbie's registration. Bannerman resubmitted the registration, alleging Debbie was denied the right to play because she is female. He received a letter from association secretary James Hartnett saying there are Squirts leagues for boys and Lassies leagues for girls.

During the hearing, the commission was told the nearest Lassies team is 20 miles away.

BUT NOT SOCCER . . .

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A soccer team from Virginia is being barred from playing in a Canadian tournament because three of its members are girls.

The Cougars of the Northern Virginia League have lost only one of seven games.

But under the rules of the Federation Internationale de Football Association (FIFA), the sport's governing body, girl players are not allowed.

"I think they just didn't want to be embarrassed if we won," said the mother of one of the 12-year-olds.

"We're going by the rules," said Donald Weakes, organizer of the invitational tournament to be held in July at Oakville, Ont.

Ducks Unlimited Budget Biggest Yet for Canada

Pat Dunn of Victoria, treasurer of Ducks Unlimited (Canada), has a record amount of money to spend on the conservation of our North American waterfowl this year.

Dunn, who also serves as one of the two trustees on the board of Ducks Unlimited Inc., the fund-raising arm of the international organization in the United States, said the Canadian body will receive $9.3 million this year with $1.7 million earmarked for British Columbia.

During a recent chat at his Oak Bay waterfront home, he explained that this flow of cash from the United States to Canada is growing by leaps and bounds.

The Canadian budget was $4.4 million in 1975 and $7.1 million in 1976 "and they're telling us to expect perhaps as much as $20 million by 1980 or '81," said Dunn.

All of the money collected through fund-raising drives in the States is spent in Canada and there is even a competition among the various states to "see who can collect the most money."

California topped the total income list for 1976 with $1.1 million and Texas was second with $750,000.

"They collected $120,000 at one dinner in Houston," he stated.

"The Americans are so alarmed at the loss of wetlands and the thought there'd be no more ducks and geese coming down from Canada."

Dunn explained that the fund-raising drives and projects are received equally well among both the hunters and non-hunters and nobody seems to think twice about spending the money outside the U.S.A.

Each of the arms of Ducks Unlimited, in the United States, Canada and most recently in Mexico, is autonomous.

"When they send that $9 million up," he explained, "we determine the spending of it."

"One of the problems is to find projects that are suitable because we don't buy any land. We haven't spent a nickel on land. We just get the owners to agree to let us use the land on a long-term lease situation."

Dunn pointed out that the new breed of farmers, many of whom have had university training, are a lot easier to approach than those of the previous generation because they realize the value of wetlands in an over-all sense.

One of the newest projects, and the first for Ducks Unlimited on Vancouver Island, is the recently-dedicated Buttercup Marsh just north of Nanaimo. This 45-acre project was just a start, however, and there are three other projects in the preliminary stages on the Island.

Most of the major projects in British Columbia are located in the Creston Valley, Columbia River, 148-Mile Ranch and Fraser River delta areas.

Habitat improvement in most cases consists of building and maintaining dykes, erecting nesting islands, excavating channels and installing control structures.

In the 40 years since it was founded, Ducks Unlimited has spent over $39 million in Canada to secure and develop 2.5 million acres of quality waterfowl habitat. It goes without saying that developments to help waterfowl also have spin-off benefits for many other species of wildlife.

"What I feel very strongly about is the argument that a lot of politicians and developers put up stating that conservation and progress aren't complementary.

"You can do both," said Dunn, citing examples in several European countries.

"Land up to a short time ago was regarded as just something that cost money to pack wheat across," he quipped.

"Now we find in our generation that we're running out of this priceless thing."

Dunn, who became involved with Ducks Umlimited after seeing the valuable work it was doing on the Prairies while hunting there just after the last war, has served as a director of the organization for eight years. It became a full-time hobby when he retired from work as a chartered accountant.

He also spearheaded the successful local movements to get Koksilah River Park and Sidney Spit set aside as provincial parks.

Ducks Unlimited (Canada) is now in the process of soliciting funds in Canada as well and further information may be obtained by writing: Ducks Unlimited (Canada), 1495 Pembina Highway, Winnipeg, Man., R3T 2E2.

It would be a worthwhile investment in the future.

Ducks Unlimited has also revamped its popular full-color identification guide to the common ducks of North America. This fantastically-detailed guide may be obtained for free by writing the British Columbia office: Ducks Unlimited (Canada), 2-345 Victoria Street, Kamloops, B.C. V2C 2A3.

Medals for Islanders

Missed in Tuesday's reports of the Canadian tenpin bowling championships at Toronto during the weekend were the names of Vancouver Island contestants who earned a big share of the medals in handicap competition.

Gail Cutforth of Duncan and Doreen Sherman of Port Alberni placed second and third in women's all-events and the Duncan pair of Helm Aichelberger and Stephen Kirkness took the silver and bronze medals in men's all-events.

Thelma Saunders of Victoria teamed with Vancouver's Bonnie Schmitke to win the women's doubles. Sherman and Alice Bilan of Campbell River placed third.

Kirkness and Aichelberger took the gold in men's doubles with Phil Ralph, Victoria, and Paul Chin, Vancouver, taking second place.

Saunders, Cutforth, George Geeseg of Duncan and Aichelberger were gold-medal winners in the mixed team event.

Rutledge Jolted, But Uplands Wins

Jim Rutledge, holder of the Vancouver Island Open crown, was jolted by Bill Coupar, but the remainder of the Uplands team took charge and handed Coupar and his Cedar Hill squad a 6½-2½ defeat Tuesday in the Inter-Club Junior Golf League.

Coupar clipped Rutledge on the last green and combined with Ray Harrington for a four-ball win to account for two of the points for Cedar Hill, which skidded out of first place into the third position.

Uplands charged into the runner-up berth behind Gorge Vale, which produced unexpected power on a visit to Royal Colwood course and trimmed the host squad 7½-1½.

In the other contest, Victoria Golf Club remained on the bottom rung of the ladder after visiting Glen Meadows and dropping a 6-3 decision.

Defence Plays Key Part As Bakers Down J-Hawks

Victoria McDonalds had things more or less their own way at Esquimalt Sports Centre Tuesday as they scored their fourth victory of the Western Canada Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League season.

The Minto Cup champions scored five straight goals in the first period after falling behind 2-1, and went on from there to rout Coquitlam J-Hawks 15-6 before a crowd of 850.

Victory moved McDonalds to within two points of second-place New Westminster Salmonbellies whom they meet at New Westminster Friday night.

Burnaby leads the league, with an undefeated record of 6-0 and is four points ahead of the Bakers who have played one more game.

Captain Jim Boyd paced the Bakers' attack with his best performance of the season. He scored three goals including the first goal of the game on the first shot of the contest at 1:11.

Coquitlam enjoyed its only moment of glory a few minutes later after Paul Michael of McDonalds took a double minor. Eric Otterstrom and Wayne McCauley scored on the power play and the J-Hawks led 2-1.

Playing sound defense and forcing many Coquitlam turnovers, McDonalds then rebounded with that five-goal surge to lead 6-2 at the break.

The teams divided six goals in the middle period with McDonalds breaking loose for four straight goals, two on power-play situations and one while shorthanded, to take a 13-5 lead early in the third.

The only goal allowed by McDonalds goalkeeper Mike Duch in the third period was on a power play, Otterstrom scoring his second goal for the J-Hawks.

McCauley also had a two-goal performance for Coquitlam while Colin Broomfield and Tom Barichello had singles.

Steve Buckley, Kevin Kennedy and Scott Browning each scored two goals for McDonalds with singles going to Lorry Gloeckner, Michael, Tej Labh, Tarey Pollock, Bruce Townsend and Jeff Whitney-Griffiths.

Bowden Paces Castle Squad

Lorne Bowden came up with a remarkable two-way performance Tuesday to lead Castle Properties to a 10-0 shutout over Taylor House Movers in a Heywood Men's Softball League game at Heywood Avenue Park.

Bowden pitched a no-hitter, giving up only two bases on balls and striking out six of the 17 batters he faced. At bat, Bowden connected for a double and a single in three trips to the plate to score twice.

It was the fourth win in as many starts for Castle and the sixth loss in a winless season for the Movers.

At Macdonald Park, Sid Chow and Mike Reimer tagged home runs as Cliff MacKay Ltd. edged Trafalgar Legion 16-15 in Macdonald Men's League play. In other games, Brent Carbery slammed out a solo homer as Central Station tripped Davidson Cement 9-6 and Victoria Athletics defeated Mayfair Insurance, 6-4.

In Sidney Men's League play at Sanscha Park, Harvey's Sporting Goods downed Sidney Hotel 3-1 behind the three-hit pitching of Don Collins.

At Hyacinth Park, Colony Inn upset previously-unbeaten GSV Combos 4-2 to move into a tie for second place in the Victoria Senior Women's League with CJVI Vicettes. In another game, Victoria Athletics nipped CRESC Angels 3-2 by scoring two runs in the seventh inning.

Champs Retain Tag-Team Crown

The Outlaw and Palardi retained their Canadian tag-team title when challengers Eddy and Gerry Morrow were disqualified in one of the two feature bouts of a professional wrestling card Monday night at Memorial Arena.

Dutch Savage defeated John Anson in the other feature.

In supporting bouts, Mike Sharpe outgrappled Eric Froelich, Gama Singh and Guy Mitchell downed Buddy Austin and Jim Cooke and Mitchell topped Paddy Ryan.

Fibak Trips Moore

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — Wojtek Fibak of Poland beat Ray Moore of South Africa 6-1, 5-7, 6-2 Sunday to win the Duesseldorf Grand Prix tennis championship. Fibak collected top money of $15,000 and Moore $7,500.

Abdul-Jabbar Most Valuable

NEW YORK (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Los Angeles Lakers centre, was the landslide selection as the National Basketball Association's 1976-77 most valuable player, the fifth time in the last seven years he has won the award.

Abdul-Jabbar, who led the Lakers to a 53-29 record in the regular season, best in the NBA, joins ex-Boston Celtics star Bill Russell as the only five-time winner of the Podoloff trophy.

Islanders Get Medals In World Pin Tourney

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. — Strength in team events carried British Columbia to a third-place finish in aggregate competition in the world five-pin bowling championships during the weekend.

Highlighting efforts by the British Columbians was a gold medal performance by a six-member Vancouver squad in the men's team event.

Vancouver Island contestants, including three bowlers and a coach from Victoria, collected second-place silver medals in the mixed team competition and a Surrey sextet gave B.C. another runner-up finish in the women's team test.

Ontario topped the aggregate list with Alberta placing second.

Doug Goodman, who rolled a 408 for the tournament's highest single game, Tony Penner, Larry Johnson, Kelly Akai, Bob Oughton and Pate Dooley were the Vancouver men who won the gold by scoring 66 points to finish ahead of Alberta (62½) and Ontario (59½).

Coached by Lyn Hickey and including Victorians Sandra Wood, Evie Weinberger and Fred Hickey, Duncan's Joan Followfield and the Nanaimo pair of Lucky Raggini and Otto Furchak, the B.C. mixed squad collected 32 points to wind up behind Ontario (41) and ahead of Northern Ontario (28).

Ontario's defending champion from Hamilton retained the women's crown with 44 points and the Surrey team took the silver medal in a playoff with Saskatchewan after the two squads had tied with 32 points.

Jan Anderson of Red Deer, Alta., closed with a rush to capture the men's open singles crown.

Anderson finished the tournament with 74 points to defeat Bud Knight (70½) of Shilo, Man., and Lloyd Omerod (67) of Hamilton.

In the women's open singles, Lil Davis of Sault Lookout, Ont., chalked up 84½ points for an easy triumph over Jean Beyko (67½) of Medicine Hat, Alta.

Three B.C. contestants were selected to tournament all-star teams, Hickey and Dooley to the men's squad and Marg Patterson of Surrey to the women's team.

8 LOCATIONS TO SERVE YOU

Thermoshell It's more than home heat

Thermoshell means warm friendly service, practical payment systems and a clean efficient way to control the temperature in your home.

A more efficient design

Perhaps you thought one furnace burner was much like another? Well, that's certainly not true anymore!

Compared to conventional models, the new thermoshell furnace with Clean-Start Burner can reduce the amount of fuel you burn by as much as 10%. This advanced design is the result of our continuing program to find ways to conserve fuel.

How it saves fuel. Your furnace goes on and off thousands of times each winter. Every time it does, some fuel is not burnt efficiently. Result? Smoky flare-ups with energy-robbing soot deposited on burner, furnace interior and flue pipe. When it's shut off some oil may leak into the combustion chamber, too.

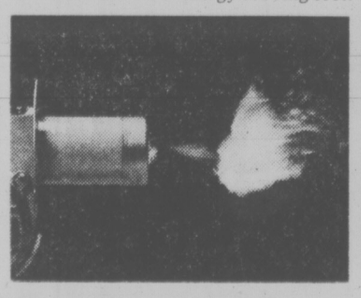
The thermoshell furnace overcomes these problems with a delayed start-up that allows a stabilized air flow/oil pressure to ensure split-second ignition. It also stops instantly on shut-off.

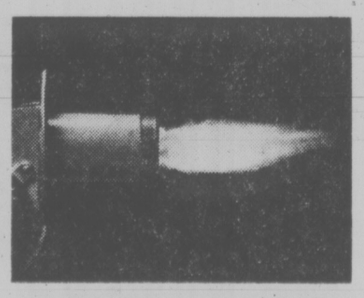
Our Clean-Start Burner has other advantages, too. A higher furnace efficiency than provided by older gun-type burners. And this efficiency can be maintained throughout the heating season. It also reduces soot emissions to the atmosphere.

If you're building a new home, or your furnace is on its last legs, give serious thought to this amazingly efficient furnace. If you pay $450 a year for fuel oil, it could mean a saving of $45!

Clean-Start Burner in action!

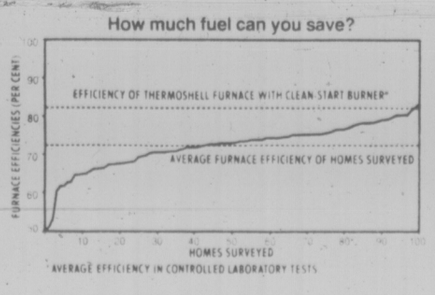
LEFT: The large, irregular flame from an old-style gun burner. RIGHT: You can see the Clean-Start Burner has a more intense and stable flame. It is also cleaner so there's less accumulation of energy-robbing soot.





How much fuel can you save?

Chart shows average efficiency of old-style burner-furnace units in a recent survey of Canadian homes. You can see that over 95% of the units were working below the 82.5% efficiency of our unit. In fact, 40% were working 10% or more below the efficiency of the thermoshell unit! (The average efficiency of all the homes was 72.5%). Now you know why we say that this amazing burner-furnace unit could reduce your fuel oil consumption by 10% or more!



You'll have a nice warm feeling for our products and services

Thermoshell Comprehensive Protection Plan

The Thermoshell Comprehensive Protection Plan for a small amount offers you an annual heating system check-up, replacement of most furnace parts (when necessary) and emergency service.

These are just some of the services the Thermoshell Comprehensive Protection Plan offers you:*

Annual furnace inspection

An inefficient furnace can result in greater fuel consumption. The annual inspection and cleanout will ensure proper performance and long life.

Parts protection

This plan ensures you protection on virtually every part vital to the operation of your heating unit.

Labour included

Our annual fee includes labour for all repairs covered under the Parts Protection Plan.

Emergency service

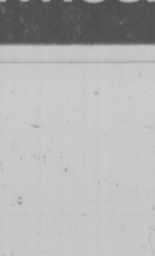
Qualified technicians are ready to service your unit day or night.

With features like these, the Thermoshell Comprehensive Protection Plan could soon pay for itself in terms of furnace performance and service, not to mention the peace of mind the plan will give you.

*The Thermoshell Comprehensive Protection Plan is valid only if your furnace is in good working condition when you sign up for Thermoshell Service.

Thermoshell Equal-Monthly-Payment-Plan

The plan allows you to space out your heating bills over ten months without interest charges. This means that fuel bills remain constant during the winter months. You can, if you like, combine this convenience with our automatic "Cheque Plan"—so you don't even have to write out a monthly cheque.



Automatic delivery

As a Thermoshell customer, you'll get your heating oil delivered automatically. Calculating from daily temperatures, and your past fuel consumption, our degree day system keeps track of approximately how much heating oil you have on hand at all times. A built-in safety margin is established for extra protection.

There are great ideas for keeping warm in our Guide to Fuel Economy

This informative, easy-to-read booklet is filled with useful hints to help you cut fuel consumption and keep your home comfortable at the same time. For your FREE copy, contact your Thermoshell Centre at the address below.

Atlanta Trades Manery to Kings

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Flames have traded Randy Manery, one of the last of the original team members, to Los Angeles Kings for veteran defenceman Ab Demarco, the National Hockey League team said Tuesday.

Manery, a defenceman, was acquired by the Flames in the 1972 expansion draft.

Demarco, 28, has seen duty with five NHL teams, scoring 44 goals and 80 assists in six seasons.

EX-PLYMOUTH COACH TO GUIDE WHITECAPS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tony Waiters, former coach of Plymouth in the English League Second Division for four and a half years, has been named coach of the Vancouver Whitecaps, the North American Soccer League club announced Tuesday.

Waiters, 39, will arrive here Thursday to replace temporary coach Holgar Osieck, who took over the team after Eckhard Krautzun resigned last week.

Whitecaps lost their second straight game Sunday when Los Angeles Aztecs posted a 3-1 victory over the visiting Vancouver team.

Bob Bolitho of Victoria scored the Whitecap goal at 74 minutes.

Junior Owners Ready To Take Legal Action

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Major Junior Hockey League plans legal action to gain compensation for players drafted by the National Hockey League, CMJHL board chairman Del Wilson said Tuesday.

Wilson was speaking after Iona Campagnolo, federal minister of recreation and sport, told a Canadian Amateur Hockey Association dinner there was nothing the federal government could do to force the NHL to pay what the junior leagues sought.

Mrs. Campagnolo, who at one time indicated there might be something the federal government could do to help the juniors, said Tuesday Ottawa has no power and no jurisdiction in the matter.

She said she was basing her decision on a report prepared for her by Doug Fisher of Hockey Canada on the matter. Fisher's report told her there was no hope for an agreement or a compromise this summer at least.

STARVATION STALKS HAITI

ANSE ROUGE, Haiti (AP) — A pregnant woman named Mees sat on a wooden crate in this dusty, drought-ridden town in northwest Haiti wondering how she would feed her unborn child and naked toddling son whose belly was already bloated.

"I'm going to beg to get money because I won't be able to work," said the newly widowed woman, who didn't know her surname or her age.

Nearby 30-year-old Mari watched her five children play in the dirt outside their one-room shack.

"The drought's much worse now because it hasn't rained for four years," she said. "Not even a flower can grow."

The United States, Canada, West Germany and seven relief agencies are making a relief effort to feed Mees, Mari and more than 320,000 other Haitians on the brink of starvation because of the worst drought of the decade.

Northwest Haiti was hit hard by drought in 1975, but this year the devastating effects of parching sunshine and lack of rain have reached into the central plateau, a 40-mile stretch of the southwest coast and the offshore island of Gonave.

United Nations expert Jean-Claude Piers, who co-ordinated a UN drought relief program in the Sahel region of Africa several years ago, toured Haiti last week and pinpointed 15 areas where 50 to 80 per cent of the population need food relief to prevent starvation.

CARD, the central Committee for Assistance to Disaster Areas set up by the Haitian government to co-ordinate relief efforts, estimates there are 320,000 hungry people in the 15 areas.

Last Charge Beaten By U.S. AIM Member

EDMONTON (CP) — Frank Blackhorse, the American Indian Movement (AIM) member wanted by the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation, was acquitted Tuesday on a charge of possessing one marijuana cigarette.

District Court Judge Arthur Crossley said the Crown had not proved beyond a reasonable doubt the substance found on Blackhorse Feb. 6, 1976, was marijuana.

Blackhorse, 22, also known as Frank Delucca, was originally convicted of the charge April 29 last year. He appealed and the case had dragged through the courts since last September.

He was returned Tuesday to Fort Saskatchewan jail, where he is serving a six-month term for escape.

Blackhorse, originally of Chicago, was arrested in February, 1976, near Robb, Alta., 140 miles west of Edmonton, and held on an immigration warrant.

Arrested with him was AIM leader Leonard Peltier, 32, found guilty April 18 this year in the United States of first-degree murder in the 1973 shooting deaths of two FBI agents on South Dakota's Pine Ridge Indian reserve.

Peltier was extradited from Canada after being held on an immigration warrant. The U.S. government waived the death penalty and the judge ordered a pre-sentence investigation. No date has been set for sentencing.

The FBI said Blackhorse is also wanted on several charges arising from the Pine Ridge incident.

Lawyer Barrie Chivers said everything points to Blackhorse being kept in custody in order to return him to the United States.

Last March, it was determined that Blackhorse had not entered Canada illegally.

TEACHER'S PET was made out of paper mache by Grade 5 students in Tacoma, but the mock-up of a sasquatch was a bit too realistic for a sheriff's deputy who answered a burglar alarm at the school. He encountered the eight-foot, luminous-eyed creature in the dark, screamed and fled.

FOOD & nutrition

Three Cheers For Chicks Hip! Hip! . . .

Today's Canadian chicken is as highly specialized as the component parts that make up a modern space craft. The chicken you buy in the store nowadays has been "design bred" — raised specifically for eating and rates high in meatiness, nutrition, taste and economy.

It's been raised and processed under controlled conditions to offer you as much as possible a product that is high quality and good tasting. So lets cheer for those Canadian chicks!

Hip, hip, protein! The protein found in chicken is of the highest quality and 3 oz. (90g) of cooked chicken not including skin, bone or fat provides 20g of protein. Compare this to the recommended daily protein intake for a moderately active adult Canadian — 41g for females and 56g for males.

Hip, hip, calories! Chicken is a low-fat meat alternate — 3 oz. (90g) of cooked chicken meat yields only 115 calories.

Hip, hip, economy! In addition to its other merits, chicken is frugality that doesn't show because it's gentle on the food budget. Cut-up chicken and chicken in parts offer maximum convenience at reasonable cost.

If whole chickens are lower in price per pound, buy these and cut them yourself. Chicken parts, bought as is or cut up at home, include breasts, legs, thighs, drumsticks, wings, back, neck, chicken half, chicken quarter and chicken hindquarter.

T (tender), L (loving), C (care)! Fresh chicken should be cooked within two or three days after purchase. If it is frozen, it will keep well at Zero degrees F (—18 degrees C) up to six months. To thaw, allow about five hours per pound in the refrigerator or about one hour per pound in cold water. Use thawed poultry within 24 hours after defrosting.

Chicken is everybody's faa-

Chicken is everybody's favorite — chicken parts make the VIP dinner scene on their own. "Sweet and Sour Chicken" and "Chicken in Tomato Sauce" look and taste rich enough ro please the most discriminating of guests. Only the chef knows for sure how easy the dishes really are to prepare. Food Advisory Division, Agriculture Canada developed both recipes with the chicken lover in mind.

SWEET AND SOUR CHICKEN

1 cut-up chicken broiler (about 4 pounds)
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons fat
1 14-ounce can pineapple tidbits
¾ cup syrup from pineapple
2 tablesoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup vinegar
¼ cup soy sauce
2 cups chicken bouillon
1 cup uncooked rice
½ cup coarsely chopped onion
1 cup diagonally sliced celery
1 cup coarsely chopped green pepper

Season chicken with salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Brown in fat 15 minutes. Remove chicken from pan and drain off excess fat. Drain pineapple, reserve ¾ cup syrup. Combine syrup from pineapple with cornstarch. Add pineapple, brown sugar, salt, vinegar and soy sauce.

Stir and cook until thick and clear. Add chicken bouillon and rice to mixture, blend thoroughly. Place chicken in greased 3-quart baking dish, pour rice mixture over chicken. Cover and bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees F. Add vegetables, cover and cook until rice and chicken are tender (about 30 minutes). Six servings.

CHICKEN IN TOMATO SAUCE

1 cut-up chicken broiler (about 4 pounds)
1 garlic clove, crushed
¼ cup fat
1 19-ounce can tomatoes
1 5½-ounce can tomato paste
1 medium onion, cut in ¼-inch slices
2 cups sliced mushrooms about ½ pound)
1½ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon tarragon
Dash tobasco sauce
2 tablespoons chopped parsley

Brown chicken and garlic in hot fat (about 25 minutes). Drain off excess fat. Return chicken to frypan or place in baking dish. Combine tomatoes, tomato paste, onion, mushrooms, and seasonings. Pour over chicken. Simmer uncovered in frypan or bake uncovered at 375 degrees F, until chicken is tender (about 45 minutes).

Park Extension Opposed

PENTICTON (CP) — The Okanagan-Similkameen Regional District has voted to oppose any extension of Manning Park.

The vote followed by two presentations made at a board meeting, one by Victor Wilson of the Okanagan-Similkameen Parks Society, and one by Fred Stinson for Northwood Mills.

The ultimate decision on the extension remains with the provincial government.

The Parks Society wants a park extension to protect seven historic trail routes over which the initial commerce for B.C. for 120 years was carried.

Jump on the Health Bandwagon

By MARY MOORE

Why should I coax sensible people to stay healthy? If your health is just so-so the joy goes out of life. I know a girl who had to cancel her first trip to Florida because of a series of treatments she was undergoing for malnutrition. Imagine that in this day of enlightenment on all facets of a healthy life.

You need one serving of liver (or other organ meat) per week. Are you listening? Once your family tastes this liver dish they will be won over.

PAN-FRIED LIVER WITH HERB SAUCE
(5 to 6 servings)

1½ lbs. beef liver sliced THIN
3 Tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. celery seed
½ tsp. paprika
½ tsp. curry powder
½ tsp. onion salt
½ tsp. M.S.G. (accent — optional
2 Tbsp.bacon drippings.

SAUCE

2½ Tbsp. bacon drippings (or butter)
2½ Tbsp. flour
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. celery seeds
¼ tsp. curry powder
1½ cup milk.

Mage sauce first by blending bacon fat, flour, salt, celery seeds and curry powder. Stir for 1 minute over heat then stir in milk until thick. Keep hot.

In a shallow dish, to make coating combine flour, salt, pepper, celery seed, paprika, curry powder, onion salt and M.S.G. (if used). Dip liver slices in this seasoned flour and coat both sides.

In large frying pan melt the 2 tablespoons bacon fat and quickly fry liver on both sides until barely done. Do not overcook. Serve at once. Pass sauce in gravy boat.

MILK CAN LOSE ITS FLAVOR AND VITAMINS IN STORES

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

DEAR RUTH AND ZAK: I have a six-month-old baby and, of course, I wish to give him the best nutritional foods. I have been making him all his food with the aid of a blender. My question isn't what he eats, however, it's what he drinks.

My mother-in-law tells me she heard a radio broadcast mention that milk purchased in plastic bag containers lose most of their nutritional value due to the fluorescent lighting found in supermarkets. Would you comment on this?—F.B., Montreal.

DEAR F.B.: The radio report was correct. Scientists at the University of Guelph and other laboratories have found that exposure to light results in chemical changes in milk. The result is the development of a strange flavor and the loss of some of the vitamin C and B-2. It is safe to assume however, that, if the milk tastes normal, the vitamin losses have not taken place. So, taste the milk before you give it to your baby.

Of course, you can't taste the milk until you get home. So, you will not know if there is anyting wrong with the particular bag of milk you bought until after you have left the store. Check the date on the bag and make sure it is as fresh as you can get it.

DEAR RUTH AND ZAK: You write that the phytic acid in whole grains could bind some minerals in the body and prevent them from being used. However, you did state that the yeast used in making whfole-wheat bread contains an enzyme that changes this acid so that it does not prevent the assimilation of minerals.

I am wondering if there would be any harm to health in eating wheat germ and nuts of whole-grain cereals.—N.R.D., Kenora, Ont.

DEAR N.R.D.: Phytic acid is present in the bran of the hull of grains and some seeds and legumes. It would be present in whole-grain cereals, but not in wheat germ and nuts. You will have to eat a great deal of whole-grain cereals and legumes to be affected. The only ones who will have to be careful are those on vegetarian diets, particularly if they are in their growing years and their mineral needs are high.

Dr. Z. I. Sabry is a professor of nutrition at the University of Guelph. Ruth Fremes is a home economist and a reporter on consumer issues on CTV's program W5.

Beard Uses Rice in Salads to Get 'Out of the Rut'

Though James Beard is often called the "dean" of knowledgeable food people, his recipes are outstanding in that they can be accomplished without outside help, without importing exotic ingredients from peculiar places and without destroying a month's food budget.

Beard feels that rice salads are "a way of taking traditional eating patterns out of depressing culinary ruts."

To demonstrate this versatility, Beard created a range of salad recipes for service now and through the warmer months. They can be prepared ahead, making them marvelous for buffet service, and can be used as main dishes for lunches or light suppers.

He warns against allowing the rice to cook to a sticky or mushy state, suggesting the uncooked (not instant) rice for these dishes. The cooked kernels should be fluffy with each kernel separate.

Beard says the secret of preparing the cooked rice for a salad is to "toss it with a little salad oil with two forks (not a spoon) so that the oil coats the cooling rice."

Later, just before serving, add chopped vegetables for flavoring — onion, garlic, celery, green pepper or tomato — and the other ingredients.

A distinctive dressing for the bland rice is a must and Beard favors creative variations to the classic vinaigrette, selected to enhance the particular ingredients.

The selections of recipes given here uses some high-cost ingredients, of course, but the rice extender adds to the servings gained.

Literature by Day, Bottoms Up at Night

By HELEN WORTHINGTON

TORONTO (CP) — Dorothy-Ann Davies isn't the first woman to work her way through college, and she won't be the last.

But she is possibly the first to do it this way: by mixing a mean martini.

Dorothy Ann, at the age of 23, begins her second year studying literature at University of Toronto in the fall and hopes one day to become a teacher.

To finance these endeavors, Dorothy Ann has just become founder and president of her own company called Bottoms Up.

It is a bartending service employing women only, and Dorothy Ann thinks it is the first all-female company of its kind in the city.

She has five young women working for her who are on call as bartenders to cater to private parties, conventions, meetings or benefits.

Dorothy Ann took a course at the Toronto Bartender's Training School last summer to obtain the skills to help work her way through college.

The course cost her $250 and a two-month effort, but since then she's been working at a Toronto restaurant evenings while she goes to school during the daytime.

She is making an average of $200 a week for four nights' work.

She admits her mother was a bit nervous at first when she decided to found a company called Bottoms Up, but she says her father is busy these days handing around her business cards and drumming up business for her.

"I've discovered that lots of people need a bartender for their parties and having a young woman behind the bar is a conversation piece," said Dorothy Ann.

Oysters On The Half-Shell

For each serving, scrub five to six medium oysters in shell under cold running water. Hold oysters (one at a time) over a bowl to catch oyster liquor. With deep half down, insert an oyster-knife or strong table-knife between shells at the hinge end; pull shells apart. Cut oyster at muscle to separate from shell. Remove any bits of shell or if this process poses difficulties, plunge oysters in shell into boiling water; drain as soon as shells open slightly. Should then open easily.

To serve: Have oysters very well-chilled; place on deep half of shell; discard other half. Arrange filled shells in cracked ice on serving platter. Serve with your choice of rye bread, lemon wedges, parsley sprigs, spicy seafood cocktail sauce, horseradish sauce and cracked black pepper.

CARROT PUDDING —SERVE WITH SAUCE

1 teaspoon soda
1 cup grated potato
1 cup flour
1 cup raisins, chopped
1 cup brown sugar
1 cup suet
1 lemon, juice and grated rind
4 oz. citron
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon allspice
1 cup grated carrot

In large bowl, combine soda and potato. Mix in remaining ingredients thoroughly. Turn mixture into a pudding bowl; cover with doubled heavy-duty foil; tie top on tightly with string. Place on rack in steamer or large Dutch oven. Add water to half way up pudding bowl.

Cover steamer; steam for three hours. Add more water, if necessary, during cooking process, but make sure the water is boiling. Turn out pudding: Remove from steamer; allow to sit for several minutes. Run knife around edge; invert quickly on serving platter. Serve with sauce.

Single Parents Up

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of one-parent families in the United States is increasing seven times as fast as that of two-parent families, says the Public Affairs Committee, a non-profit group. There now are almost five million single parents in the U.S. raising about 10 million children.

USE CROCKPOT TO BEEF YOUR MENUS

Did you ever stop to think that the difference between spaghetti sauce and chili can be beans and chili powder? The next time you plan to have homemade spaghetti, make lots more sauce and serve chili a meal or two later. Leave out the beans and the sauce is great over hot dogs. And think of all the time and energy you're saving!

1. Browning the beef first is not necessary, but it does tend to improve the flavor and allows you to drain off any excess fat.

2. Because there is little evaporation, less liquid is necessary. For most recipes, use approximately half the normal amount of liquid.

3. Some vegetables require as much cooking time as the beef so arrange large chunks of celery or carrot on the bottom and cover them with the liquid.

4. To thicken the gravy or sauce, stir in cornstarch or dissolved flour after the meat is done. Cook on high for 5-10 minutes.

5. To decide if beef is done, cook the minimum length of time and then remove one piece. Test to see if meat is fork-tender.

6. Don't worry about overcooking. The food will not burn or taste over-cooked.

Here are some slow cooker recipes:

STAYABED STEW

2 lb. stewing beef, round steak, brisket or cooked ground beef
1 cup sliced carrots
2 onions (sliced)
3 large potatoes (in small chunks)
1 small can tomato soup, thinned with ¼ cup water
Salt and pepper

Mix above ingredients together. Cover and cook at low setting for 6-8 hours. Tomato soup can be replaced by celery or mushroom soup. Celery, frozen green peas or any vegetable you have around can be added. For variation, try chili powder, bay leaves, oregano, rosemary leaves or garlic salt.

WESTERN STEAK

Two pounds blade, chuck, round or flank steak cut as thin as possible. Sprinkle with flour, salt and pepper and pound into meat. Brown meat in fry pan with ¼ cup oil. Transfer to crock pot.

Sauce:
¼ cup catsup
2 tblsp. brown sugar
2 tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. chili powder
¼ cup water
1 tblsp. horseradish
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tblsp. chopped green pepper
2 tblsp. vinegar

Heat sauce and pour over meat. Cook on high for 3-4 hours or low for 6-7 hours.

BUDGETER'S BEEF STROGANOFF

⅓ cup flour
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
½ tsp. garlic salt
2 lbs. chuck, shoulder or short-rib cut into 1½" cubes or stewing beef
¼ cup oil
1 medium onion, chopped
½ cup water
1 bay leaf
½ tsp. thyme
½ cup sliced mushrooms
¾ cup dairy sour cream
1 tblsp. horseradish
¼ cup sauterne or other white wine (optional)

Dredge cubes of beef in flour which has been seasoned with salt and pepper and garlic salt. Heat the oil in a heavy fry pan. Add floured meat and brown quickly on all sides. Add onion, water, bay leaf and thyme. Cover and cook on low setting for 6-8 hours. Five minutes before serving, add mushrooms, sour cream, horseradish and wine. Just bring to a boil.

Serve with green rice — cook long grain rice by normal method. Just before serving, stir in approximately 1 cup finely chopped parsley. Arrange rice in a ring around the outside of the platter. Fill the centre with the stroganoff.

SPICEY POT ROAST

5 lbs. blade, chuck or small shoulder roast
2 tblsp. shortening
½ tsp. thyme
2 tblsp. sugar
1 tblsp vinegar
1 minced clove garlic or ⅛ tsp. garlic salt
2 cups tomato juice
1 cup chopped onion
1 bay leaf
1½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper

Brown meat on all sides in shortening. Transfer to crock pot. Combine next 9 ingredients and pour over meat. Cover and cook on high approximately 6 hours. Strain gravy and thicken with flour. Serve with mashed potatoes and buttered carrots (or baked potatoes and French green beans).

Chicken Wings: Fiddley But Adorable

tiny bennett

As long as stores sell cut-up chicken parts chicken wings will be one of the very best buys in the meat department. Oh, I know all the arguments, that they are fiddley to prepare and that there's too much bone in relation to meat, but I don't care. I adore chicken wings, I've a thousand recipes for them and they fit right in there with my economy ideas.

Chicken, an excellent source of high quality protein, is good to excellent in niacin, a fair source of iron and contains that essential trace material potassium. I'm very aware of the body's need for potassium, as I experienced a shortage once, and it was not at all pleasant.

Being a sort of cross between white and dark meat, the wings tot up about 140 calories per 3½ ounce serving, and you must remember this does not mean 3½ ounces of chicken wings, but 3½ ounces of the meat from chicken wings — that's a lot.

The best way to ready these delicious morsels is to cut off the tip and throw it into your stock pot and then cut the main part of the wing into two joints.

For a really simple dish, I boil up some chicken stock, throw in the tips and then the sections as they come from the cutting block, and adding an onion, a carrot and a length of celery, I bring them up to the boil, lower the heat, clap on a tight fitting lid and let them simmer until they are nice and tender, but not falling off the bone.

The cooked wings can be eaten hot, cooled and served in a salad, or used in all kinds of dishes from curries to rice pilafs. The kids like them as the meat part of their school lunch, and don't forget to include a piece of paper towel in the lunch box, as wings are essentially "finger-foods". And while I'm on this subject, give them crunchy foods such as carrot sticks, celery curls and crisp, fresh lettuce. With two or three whole wings this makes not only a tasty and different lunch, but a healthy one too.

By cooking a big batch of wings at once, you can come up with an incredible permutation of super dishes. Say, for example, you have no chicken stock. Put a big batch of wings in water to cover, add the essential onion, carrot and stick of celery, six black peppercorns, two cloves, dash of thyme, and a little paprika, and simmer it away until the wing sections are done. Remove the wing parts, leaving the tips in the pot, and simmer covered for two hours on the lowest heat.

The edible parts can be cooled and kept in the fridge, where they are ready to be used in any number of different dishes. You don't have to use them all at once, but can leave them there covered for two to three days.

The liquid in the pot at the end of the simmering should be quite a rich stock and when correctly salted it becomes soup. You can pour a quantity into another pot, enough for soup for all the family and if you chop up different vegetables and simmer them in the soup, you can really impress guests and family.

The really lovely thing about making soup in this way is that you can use up the different parts that are usually thrown out — the ends of asparagus, for example.

Cut the discarded woody ends of the asparagus into one inch lengths, cutting on the bias so as to expose a maximum of cut inner surface and simmer them for one hour in the soup. The soup is then beaten up in a blender (doesn't matter, if you have no blender) and VERY carefully strained through a metal strainer and then through three thicknesses of cheese cloth, and served as asparagus soup. Strain most carefully, as this is an extremely fibrous vegetable and you don't want little woody bits spoiling a dish that will really impress your friends.

Other vegetables used for this kind of soup include broccoli, celery, beet dice, potato dice, mushrooms and leeks, to name but a few, and you strain or serve without straining, according to the quality of the materials. Passing these through a blender produces a cream-of-soup dish and a big dollop of cream in the pot won't hurt one little bit.

For the wings in the fridge, here is just one of my recipes. I snitched it from the Feb. 1976 issue of Gourmet magazine and it has become a great favorite in my home.

CHICKEN WINGS CHASSEUR

Sprinkle salt and pepper over your cooked but firm wing sections and dredge lightly with flour before sauteeing in two tbs. butter and one tbs. olive oil. Using moderately high heat, keep them on the move, turning and returning until nicely browned.

Remove on a slotted spoon and saute ½ cup chopped green onions, two tbs. minced onions, and one minced garlic clove, until the onion is softened. Add ¼ pound chopped mushrooms, 1 tbs. minced parsley, ½ tsp. thyme, and salt and pepper to taste, and then saute for five minutes. Add ½ cup white wine and cook this mixture over a high heat, until the liquid is reduced by half.

Return the wings to the pan, stir in ⅔ cup of unseasoned chicken stock, ½ cup peeled, chopped tomato and then add salt and pepper on a final taste basis. Cook covered for 30 minutes and serve.

CHOCOLATE MOUSSE PIE

8 or 9-inch baked pie shell
1½ cups semi-sweeet chocolate pieces
¼ cup water
2 tbsp. sugar
4 eggs, separated
1 tsp. vanilla
½ cup chopped nuts sweetened, whipped whipping cream (garnish)
chocolate curls (garnish)

Prepare pie shell. Cool thoroughly. In top of double boiletr, over hot not boiling water, combine chocolate pieces, water, and sugar. Cook, stirring frequently, until chocolate has melted. Remove from heat; allow to cool slightly. Add egg yolks and vanilla; beat with wire whisk until well-combined. Set aside. Beat egg whites until stiff.

Gently fold whites and nuts into chocolate mixture until no streaks of white remain. Pile mixture into prepared pie shell. Place in refrigerator; allow to chill at least 6 hours.

Wheat Short? Try Other Grains

hilda beastall

Comfortably relaxed in our Vancouver Island climate, we have little understanding of what dry weather in spring means to the wheat-raising areas. Yet a prolonged spring drought on southern Canadian prairies could ultimately mean a shortage of wheat flour and other wheat products here in Victoria.

How would we homemakers react? "Complain initially, most likely ("they" should do something about it.") Then panic, about shortages of the bread we are accustomed to as daily food.

If other grain supplies are not limited, we would show a fine sense of adjustment by using a variety of grains to make our bread and many other nutritious foods. We would gain an understanding of new flavors, among other experiences.

Grains such as rye, oats, millet, barley and brown rice are all available in the form of flour, flakes or grain on grocery shelves and with the addition of soy in a variety of forms, are ready for our experimenting, now.

When we use these non-wheat ingredients, a loaf of bread or a batch of cookies will not look or taste the same as bread and cookies made from wheat flour. They will have their distinctive flavors and textures, as well as a different nutritional value.

For many homemakers and their families, the use of milled flours other than wheat already is familiar. The flavor and texture is no longer strange but well-liked and, indeed, preferred to an all wheat product.

Here is a loaf made without wheat and without yeast; delicious in flavors and very satisfying in thin slices.

NON-WHEAT BREAD

¾ cup dark rye flour
1 cup finely ground oat flakes
¾ cup sunflower meal OR ground raw peanuts
¾ cup rice polishings
1 cup millet flour
½ cup soy flour
¾ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
3 Tbsp. oil or soft margarine
1½ cups water

Measure and mix all dry ingredients in bowl. Add oil and water in depression in centre. Stir well until mixed.

Spoon into well greased 9x5x3-inch bread pan.

Bake in slow oven 163 deg. C. about 1 hour or until firm. Test in centre with knife. Cover loosely with foil if needed to prevent scorching. Remove at once from pan to cool on wire rack. Brush with oil while still, hot, for soft crust. This loaf weighs 900 gms., (2 pounds).

Slice thin for cheese sandwiches, or with soup, salad, or with fresh uncooked fruits as they become available. Ideal for lone homemakers, lasting several days yet not monotonous as is bought wheat bread. Next bakings can vary ingredients for change of flavor.

Now for a non-wheat basic recipe for a hot cereal, which can be turned into either a dessert or a complete savory meal by adding fruits for dessert, and vegetables and herbs for the savory.

BASIC HOT CEREAL

½ cup oat flakes
½ cup millet
2 Tbsp. soy grits
2 to 3 cups water
1 Tbsp. oil or margarine

Combine and simmer 15 minutes. Oil helps prevent grain mixtures boiling over edge of pan. Add few grains of salt.

Serve hot with milk. This makes a complete protein breakfast. Add a few raisins, cut dates and a sprinkling of skim milk powder for variety, extra flavor and nutrients. Serves 3 or 4.

For a Complete Supper Dish, use Basic Cereal plus a few extras as the next recipe indicates.

COMPLETE SUPPER DISH

Basic Hot Cereal (as above)
½ cup split green peas
1 Tbsp. chopped green chives
1 tsp. chopped parsely or chervil
¼ cup chopped fresh comfrey tips ground nuts or grated cheese

To lessen work and avoid waste of electricity, first cook split peas in one cup of water for 15 minutes. Add oat flakes, millet, soy grits and comfrey from Basic Recipe, with another cup of water. Return to boiling, adding an extra half-cup boiling water if mixture is too stodgy to cook.

Cook together for 15 minutes; add chives and parsley. Mix and serve hot, sprinkling each serving with ground nuts and grated Cheddar cheese. Serves three or four.

A fresh green salad with homemade yogurt goes well with this, or salad may be served separately with fresh or dried fruit.

You notice that no wheat or wheat product appears in either of these recipes.

Most macaroni and noodles are a wheat product, though soy macaroni and millet macaroni are mentioned in a few cookbooks. Soy type is available locally but I haven't yet come across the millet type. In your own experiments with grains other than wheat, use combinations of dark rye flour, millet flour, rice flour, fine oatmeal (I grind oat flakes to fineness wanted), and soy flour.

Two tablespoons of soy flour to every cup of other flours upgrades the total food value.

Two kinds of these flours used together, plus the soy, not only results in increased flavor but noticeably improved nutrition. This in turn leads to less consumption of food quantity, less bought snack foods and ultimately to lower cost per meal serving.

Before the need arises, this exercise in eating daily meals with wheat will be revealing in many ways. Try it, if for no other reason than you believe it impossible to enjoy meals for even a full day without wheat or wheat products.

CHOCOLATE ZUCCHINI LOAF

¾ cup butter
2 cups sugar
3 eggs
2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ cup cocoa
1 tsp. salt
2½ tsp. baking powder
1½ tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. cinnamon
2 cups grated zucchini (skins peeled, seeds removed)
½ cup milk
2 tsp. vanilla
1 cup chopped nuts

In large mixing bowl, beat together butter and sugar. Beat in eggs, one at a time. In separate large bowl, sift together flour, cocoa, salt, baking powder, baking soda, and cinnamon. Add sifted dry ingredients in three additions alternately with grated zucchini and milk, beating well after each addition.

Stir in vanilla and nuts. Divide batter into two greased and floured 9x5-inch loaf pans.

Bake in 350 degrees F oven approximately one hour or until cake tester inserted in centre comes out clean. Cool cake in pans on wire rack for 10 minutes; loosen around edges with knife. Turn out onto wire rack; allow to cool completely. Frost with chocolate butter icing, if desired. Makes two loaves.

PURPLE IS BEAUTIFUL

Think purple this spring because purple is beautiful. Grape juice is in plentiful supply because of last fall's record crop so take advantage of it and add sparkle to your life.

A one-cup serving of vitamined grape juice does more than just tickle your taste buds . . . it supplies your daily requirement of Vitamin C. Besides, it makes a sparkling change from your everyday breakfast orange juice. Chilled grape juice makes a satisfying mid-afternoon snack or a zesty appetizer before dinner.

Grape drinks rate high at Food Advisory Division, Agriculture Canada. Grape Blossom is a frothy purple concoction for young and old alike — it's also a painless way to get calcium and vitamin C. Note that ice cream has gone metric and is now sold by the litre. Another favorite, Frothy Grape Milk is sure to add pure purple sparkle to any event!

GRAPE BLOSSOM

1 cup milk
2 cups grape juice
2 teaspoons sugar
500 ml vanilla ice cream, softened
6 small clusters of grapes (optional)

Combine milk, grape juice and sugar. Chill. Just before serving beat in ice cream. Pour into chilled glasses. Top each with a cluster of grapes.

FROTHY GRAPE MILK

1 cup milk
1 6-ounce can frozen grape juice concentrate
½ cup egg whites (about 6 whites)
¼ cup sugar
2 cups crushed ice (8 to 10 cubes)

Combine milk, grape juice, egg whites and sugar. Beat until light and frothy. Add crushed ice. Serve immediately in chilled glasses. Makes six 6-ounce servings.

dear abby

Student Complains

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to complain about all the rotten things that go on at our high school.

First, somebody broke the faucet in the hall near study hall, and they don't know who did it, so they are just leaving it broken. Now, nobody can get a drink.

Also, some kids have been smoking in the bathrooms, so now all the doors are removed from the individual toilet rooms, and there is no privacy for anybody!

I don't think that's fair, do you? Why should everyone have to suffer because of what a few kids do? — BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: It's not fair. But the authorities can't punish only the guilty because they don't know who they are, so they punish everyone, figuring the guilty ones will be punished by their peers — who KNOW who they are.

DEAR ABBY: I called on some friends yesterday, and would you believe they still had their Christmas tree up?

Naturally I couldn't very well ignore a fully decorated eight-foot Christmas tree standing in their living room so I said, "My your tree is just as beautiful now as it was when you put it up last December! How long do you plan on leaving it up?"

The lady answered me with a straight face, "Oh, we haven't even thought about taking it down. We've grown accustomed to it. And it's plastic, so the needles won't be failing."

Then I said, "It's quite unusual for people to have a Christmas tree up in May. Perhaps you should call the press and have them come out and take a picture of it."

She didn't even acknowledge my suggestion, and then her husband started talking about something else.

Now, Abby, I ask you, does a Christmas tree in May make any sense to you? Should I call the press? It might make an interesting news item. Or perhaps I should ring up the state institution and ask them to send the men in white coats with their butterfly nets, — NAMELESS

DEAR NAMELESS: Don't call anybody. Dismantling a Christmas tree is no small task, and since it's their tree and their home, it's their right to leave it up until next Christmas — which may be what they have in mind.

DEAR ABBY: I am considering marrying a man who has been married before. (I have not.) We are both in our middle 30s, and have gone together for two years and love each other very much. My question: How much should I know about his former marriage?

When we first met he told me he was divorced, and he has never made reference to that subject again. I've held off asking any questions, hoping he'd bring it up again. I don't want to know anything that is none of my business, but I want to know as much as I should. How much is that? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Inquire only about things that may concern your lives together should you marry. Has he children? Is his former wife still his financial responsibility? What were the grounds for divorce? Are they on friendly terms? This information is indeed your business and you have a right to know.

DOCTOR-PATIENT COURTESY IMPORTANT

your health

By LESTER COLEMAN, MD

When I call my doctor, even at his suggestion, I feel as if I must first pass muster with a sergeant in the Marine Corps. His nurse's attitude drives every thought out of my head and if she finally consents to let me talk to the doctor I forget much of what I wanted to ask. Worse than that, I forget what he said! Why do some nurses seem to be so belligerent with patients? — Mrs. A.J.I.

DEAR MRS. I.: It is essential that the doctor, during office hours, be protected from telephone calls as much as possible. This is understandable. But the attitude you describe has no place in the doctor-patient relationship and, in fact, can be very destructive to it.

You have a right to call the doctor. The doctor has a right to be too busy to talk to you at the moment. It is simple to set a mutually convenient time when such conversation can be unhurried and meaningful.

I recently called a colleague to report on a patient of his whom I had seen in consultation. Even though I introduced myself to the nurse as "Doctor" her supercilious attitude prompted her to say, "The doctor is busy. Can I help you?" I deliberately said, "You certainly can. Would you be good enough to tell me if there is any coronary or pulmonary contraindication to the surgery of the larynx that I intend to do for your patient?"

Of course, she was speechless, then quickly suggested she'd better have the doctor answer that himself . . . which is exactly what she should have done in the first place.

Even in this case, the doctor might well have been busy, but the nurse would have served the doctor and the caller better had she said, "I'm so sorry, the doctor is unable to come to the phone now. Can I have him call you back?"

With such courtesy, the relationship between doctors and patients (and even colleagues) is solidified. The inflection of the voice actually becomes as important as the words themselves. Patients, tense and anxious about physical symptoms, need gentleness, reassurance and kindness from receptionists and nurses.

Every person in contact with the patient makes a definite imprint on the harmonious affinity with the doctor. Warm understanding, even under the duress of frenetic office and hospital activity, is the right of every patient.

I wonder if your doctor knows about his nurse's attitude. If he does not, you would be doing him an enormous service by calling this to his attention. For he, too, is the beneficiary of the civility that should be directed to all his patients.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: I purchased some pots with wicks to save me time in caring for my many houseplants. Can you give me some advice on their use and do you recommend them? — J.W.

DEAR J.W.: Wick watering is an efficient way to water plants but should be used only on plants requiring a constant supply of moisture, such as camellia, citrus, African violets, ferns and gardenias. Just water them every few days during the growth period, so that the soil never dries out. Don't let the soil become waterlogged, either.

You can make your own "wick-waterer." It is very simple and rather ingenious. A length of material, such as nylon stockings, capable of absorbing and transmitting moisture is inserted into a pot through a drainage hole and drawn up halfway into the pot. An equal amount of wick should extend below the pot.

Follow the normal potting procedure, filling the pot with drainage material, soil and your plant. Then fill a deep, wide saucer with clean pebbles and push the free end of the wick all the way down through the pebbles to the base of the saucer. Stand the pot on top of the pebbles, then fill the saucer with water. The wick should supply the lower half of the pot and the plant's roots with a steady amount of water.

Water the plant once from above and then water again from above only if the wick seems not to be working. Remember, the pot should be standing on top of the pebbles, and not in the water — a definite no-no.

Abducted 8 Months, Man Freed

BOGOTA (UPI) — An American businessman has been released by the kidnappers that abducted him eight months but the victim dropped out of sight and details of his release remain a mystery.

Neither Colombian nor U.S. embassy spokesmen would officially confirm the release of Gustavo Curtis, 52, of New York but sources said he was set free and in good health.

Colombian and American officials maintain a strict policy of secrecy in kidnap cases.

City Scientist On Arctic Study Team

A Victoria environmental scientist is one of two Canadians named to an eight-man international group to recommend research in the Arctic.

He is Dr. Lynn Lewis, an oceanographer and frozen sea specialist with Environment Canada's Institute of Ocean Sciences, who joins Vancouver-based Dr. E. C. Carmack, also an oceanographer with Environment Canada, as a member of a sub-group of the Scientific Committee on Oceanic Research which met here last week.

Others of the eight include scientists from Russia, Norway, U.K., Germany and the U.S.

Specific terms of reference for the new working group are to assess what is known of the Arctic Ocean heat dispersal system and the physical processes controlling it and to recommend a co-ordinated international research effort to improve understanding of the heat budget and its controlling processes.

The study will be conducted in the light of work being of the Global Atmospheric Research Program in which some 15 nations are co-operating.

Spokesmen for SCOR reject any suggestion that their interest in the Arctic is related to northern exploitation by the oil industry.

Dr. Konstantin Fedorov of Moscow, who is president of the executive committee, said concern for the Arctic which has high priority in Canada, and escalating development by the petroleum industry, done by the polar sub-group are incidental to the scientific community.

"We will create a body of knowledge everyone is free to use," the Russian oceanographer said.

"We are not doing anything for industry," added vice-president Prof. Paul Tchernia, who retired last year from the Museum of Natural History in Paris.

His specialty is the study of ocean circulation in polar regions, in which iceberg tracking plays a role.

Fedorov, from the Institute of Oceanology in Moscow, said the committee represents national academies and scientific organizations such as the Academy of Sciences of the U.S.S.R., the Royal Society, the Academy of Sciences of France, and the United Nations Educational and Scientific Organization to which it is under contract.

SCOR, the ocean sciences committee, was established by the International Council of Scientific Unions and has had over the past 20-30 years 58 subcommittees to study special subjects. There are now 17 working committees, including the new Arctic group.

Two Canadians are members of SCOR, Dr. Robert W. Stewart as president of the Physical Oceanographic Commission of the International Association for the Physical Sciences of the Ocean.

He is director-general of the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay, where the scientists met.

The other Canadian is Dr. Tim Parsons, of the University of B.C., president of the International Association of Biological Oceanographers. The group also includes the U.K., Germany and the U.S.

Fedorov said the committee helps international co-operation in scientific work, particularly in bringing different disciplines together to help achieve common goals.

Since the late 1950s the association has aimed at generating new ideas and at making them work in the most efficient and economical ways.

Much of the effort is directed ultimately toward the role of oceans, ice, heat energy and atmospheric circulation in world climate.

Fedorov said the Arctic group would be looking closely at heat from various sources — solar radiation, ocean currents, winds, geothermal conductivity and rivers.

He said his own particular interests as a physical oceanographer are directed toward air-sea interaction, temperature and salinity, currents, and thermodynamics of the ocean.

Another important role of the committee, he said, is in determining standards for measurement in scientific processes. A subcommittee is evaluating CTD data (conductivity, temperature and density) as part of this work.

Booklet Tells Where To Flee

SALISBURY (AP) — With at least 1,400 whites leaving the country each month, a 20-page booklet entitled Where To Emigrate has become a best-seller in embattled Rhodesia. It costs $6.40.

The book, sold through a post office box, lists 15 likely countries for Rhodesians to settle.

The government has made no attempt to stop sales of the book, which offers advice on how to get resident permits, outlines the climate and cost of living of each country, and even warns of pitfalls.

But Rhodesia has erected a formidable set of restrictions to try to halt the population drain—more than double the 850 a month two years ago.

Whites who emigrate are each allowed to take with them the equivalent of $1,600 in cash, one car and personal jewelry.

Despite the curbs, the exodus continues in the former British colony of 272,000 whites and 6.5 million blacks.

Official figures published here Tuesday recorded a net outflow of 1,034 whites in April—400 more than the month before. The net loss of whites in the first four months of this year was 3,587—a hefty increase over the 330 lost the year previously.

"There's no point staying here to watch the country go black, then fall apart like the rest of Africa," said a young insurance salesman who spends five months of the year in the bush hunting insurgents who seek to overthrow the white-minority government.

"I'm buying a two-way ticket on holiday to England, but I'm throwing away the return half when I get there."

Notable English-speaking countries excluded from the emigration guide are the United States, Britain, Ireland and South Africa.

But, it notes: "Canada's greatest need is for people with clerical, sales, service and managerial experience followed by individuals with professional, trade and technical skills."

Israeli PM Gets Okay By Doctors

Times News Services

TEL AVIV — Doctors treating Likud party leader Menachem Begin said today he is healthy enough to assume the post of Israeli prime minister despite his recent illness.

Dr. Shlomo Laniado, head of the cardiac intensive care unit at Tel Aviv's municipal hospital, said Begin had not suffered a heart attack Monday and described his condition as very good.

The 64-year-old politician, whose right-wing coalition won a plurality in the Israeli elections, had a heart attack two months ago. But Laniado told a news conference Begin's present condition was caused by inflammation of the membrane surrounding the heart, which frequently follows heart attacks. It would be treated with aspirin.

The doctor said Begin would remain in the hospital until the end of the week for rest and would then be able to resume active politics. He he advised Begin to stop working 15 to 20 hours a day, as he had been doing up to and after last week's elections.

Begin is holding talks in the hospital on negotiations between Likud and other parties that may join in a new coalition government. He was due to be removed from the intensive care unit to a priate hospital room later today.

The Likud party has offered a compromise whereby a Likud-led government would agree not to annex or change the status of the occupied territories on the West Bank of the Jordan River without first seeking a fresh mandate in new elections, The Washington Post reported today.

The offer was made to Yigael Yadin and his Democratic Movement for Change in an effort to bridge the differences between the two parties in the hope of forming a broad coalition, according to Zalman Shoval, a member of the Likud executive.

Shoval said Likud also told that, although the law allows any Israeli government to impose Israeli law on the occupied territories, a Likud government would not do so as long as there were peace negotiations with the Arabs and not in any case without the specific authority of the parliament.

Likud's platform states that the occupied West Bank should remain under Israeli sovereignty. The Democratic Movement opposes annexation and would barter parts of the West Bank for peace.

PODGORNY

No Major Impact Seen in Podgorny Ouster

MOSCOW (AP) — President Nikolai Podgorny's ouster from the Communist party politburo is the first major shakeup in Kremlin leadership since Premier Nikita Khrushchev was ousted 13 years ago.

But its effect on the Soviet people and government policy appears to be slight.

"He doesn't appear to have had a major impact on policy in the past, and I don't see that his absence will have a major impact," a Western diplomatic observer said.

"No one knows why he was dropped," another observer said.

The possibilities included age or ill health, but the lack of any mention of these suggested that the reason was more serious.

Podgorny, at 74, is the oldest of the three men who ousted Khrushchev in 1964. Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev, the country's real leader, is 70 and Premier Alexei Kosygin is 73.

Since 1964 the top leadership has remained stable, with a gradual shifting of power to Brezhnev. Some observers suggested Brezhnev will take over the presidency to further consolidate his position.

He might take over the post directly or through some provision in the new Soviet constitution due to be published during the next few days — that would reorganize the entire Soviet leadership system.

Podgorny, who rose from sugar plant manager to become president in 1965, remained one of the Soviet Union's top leaders until it was announced that he had been "freed" from his duties on the 15-member Communist party politburo, the power centre of the Soviet Union.

Officially, he retained the largely ceremonial post of president, but without politburo membership he is not likely to hold onto it.

Both Kosygin and Brezhnev have been more active policymakers than Podgorny. Brezhnev has control of foreign policy and is undisputed national leader while Kosygin formulates economic policy.

Although Podgorny has been well-travelled and highly visible in his ceremonial role as head of state, analysts have not given him serious attention as a policymaker and he has not been the subject of political speculation as had other leaders.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the accomplishments of the late leader of India, Jawaharlal Nehru, was the acquisition of a master's touch at bridge. Although he played infrequently, he often referred to the game to illustrate the difference between determinism and free will.

"Determinism is like the cards that are dealt you," he once said. "Free will is how you play them. The interaction between the two points out what you are as a person — or even a nation."

I have grave doubts that Nehru ever lectured on "determinism" and "free will" to a conference of bridge players, but if he had he could have used today's deal to concretize his comments. He was sitting in the South seat.

6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ◇.

After capturing the opening diamond lead, Nehru perceived that he had no losers in either hearts, diamonds or clubs. And since the four outstanding spades figured to be divided either 3-1 or 2-2, the contract appeared to be a cinch, with just one loser to the defender's ace of spades.

If Nehru had proceeded in this optimistic fashion, he might well have led a spade towards dummy's jack at trick two. Had he done this, he would have gone down, for after the board's jack of spades had won the trick, West would have had two sure trump winners with this remaining A-10-6.

But Nehru, appreciating the possibility that the adversely held trumps might be divided 4-0, led the king of trumps at trick two. West won this trick with his ace and returned a club. This was taken by dummy's ace, after which a heart was led to South's queen. Next came the nine of spades, and West's ten was trapped. It now became a routine matter to pick up West's two remaining trumps.

If, in theory, West had failed to follow suit to the lead of the trump king, East would have been revealed as the possessor of the A-10-6-2. Upon winning his ace, East would return, let us say, a diamond, South winning. A trump to dummy's jack would then follow, after which the board's last trump would be led. East's remaining 10-6 would now be trapped by South's Q-9.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"See what I bought for the front porch," said Jane. "The zinnias were 60 cents each, the geraniums 85 cents. Just $15.45 the lot."

Harry looked. "Very nice, but why didn't you get more of the geraniums?"

"I did think of it," his wife replied. "If I had switched quantities the total would have been a dollar more."

How many of each did she buy?

Thanks for idea to A. G. Bradbury, North Bay, Ont.

Boyle in Victoria This Week To Address Naval Conference

Vice-Admiral Douglas Boyle, maritime commander, will be in Victoria this week to speak at the 32nd annual conference of the Naval Officers' Association of Canada.

Also here to speak on the ship replacement program will be Commodore John Allan, director general maritime engineering maintenance.

Their visit begins this evening with a reception aboard the destroyer HMCS Mackenzie.

Business sessions will be held Thursday and Friday in the Naden wardroom of CFB Esquimalt.

The association has approximately 10,000 members across Canada and delegates will be in Victoria from 14 major cities that have NOA branches.

The last time the Naval Officers' Association of Vancouver Island hosted the conference was in 1967. President of the local branch is Aubrey Karagianis, 3230 Harriet.

A large delegation from the United States Naval Reserve Association will attend, including representatives from Washington, D.C., Illinois, Ohio, Kansas, Michigan, California and Washington State. Capt. Robin Goodenough, USNR, or Arlington, Va., is the USNRA president.

Capt. A. A. Hensher, RN, naval adviser to the British high commission in Ottawa, will also attend.

Incoming president of the NOA is Duncan-born Vice-Admiral Harry Porter, former chief of maritime command. Prior to becoming commissioner of police for Nova Scotia, Porter was a director of the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repair Association.

The incumbent president is Alex Joy, a lawyer from Metropolitan Toronto.

NOA is composed of retired regular force officers as well as both serving and retired reserve officers.

Local vice-president Jack Koyl, 2073 Pauls Terrace, reports the NOA's purpose is "to keep a watchful eye on matters of maritime concern, particularly naval concern." The NOA also helps the Navy League of Canada in its youth training programs for Royal Canadian Sea Cadets, Navy League Cadets and Navy League Wrenettes.

The NOA has presented briefs to the federal government on such matters as the Canadian merchant marine, water safety, Arctic maritime capability, co-ordination of government fleets, air-sea rescue, naval ship replacement program and replacement of the Argus long-range patrol aircraft.

"We believe our representation on air-sea rescue has had a significant effect on the improved facilities now being provided," Koyl said. "The long-range patrol aircraft program is now under way and the naval ship replacement program is finally getting off the ground."

Margaret a Lesson To Leaders' Wives

WASHINGTON — Joan Mondale, wife of the U.S. vice-president, thinks Margaret Trudeau is something of an object lesson in how a political leader's wife shouldn't behave.

Mrs. Mondale, who says she worries often about saying or doing "the wrong thing" and hurting her husband's career, believes that is something the Canadian prime minister's wife did by wearing a short dress to a White House state dinner.

"You have to learn what's right and what's wrong," says Mrs. Mondale in the current Ladies Home Journal. "Like you don't wear a short dress to the White House as Mrs. Trudeau did last February.

"Now I know she likes cut-off skirts and it was a beautiful dress, and her mother made it for her — which made it even more special. I understand all that, and I'm not being critical, but in Washington you just have to be careful about such tings.

"You have to measure your words and hold your tongue before you speak," Mrs. Mondale, a 46-year-old minister's daughter, told an interviewer. "It takes a while to learn how to act correctly."

Mrs. Trudeau's choice of a calf-length dress for the formal February dinner — at which all other women guests wore long dresses—set Washington society columnists and socialites atwitter.

'Fixation' for Prince Leads to Mental Home

LONDON — A widow from Los Angeles was under observation today in a English psychiatric hospital because of what police call a "fixation" she has for Prince Charles. Police said Barbara Jean Nieberg, 28, arrived with her nine-year-old son Tuesday at Charles' country home in suburban Sevenoaks and broke two windows because the caretaker would not let her in.

Charles was on a tour of Scotland, 400 miles to the north. A police spokesman said Mrs. Nieberg has a "fixation" about the bachelor prince and the current celebrations marking Queen Elizabeth's 25 years on the throne and was ordered under psychiatric observation for three days.

SEATTLE — A Bothel, Wash., woman, who suffered a stroke after taking oral contraceptives, has been awarded $400,000 damages by a King County superior court jury. The suit was filed against American Home Products and its subsidiary, Wyeth Laboratories of Philadelphia, the largest manufacturer of oral contraceptives in the United States. Laura M. Jurin contended that she suffered the stroke July 27, 1972, about six weeks after she began using the contraceptival ovral as directed. She suffered permanent partial paralysis of her left arm and left leg.

MONTREAL — Georges Lemay, who masterminded a 1961 robbery in which bandits tunnelled into a Montreal Bank and stole more than $600,000, was acquitted Tuesday on a charge of possession of burglar's tools. Lemay, once described as Canada's most wanted criminal, was acquitted by Judge John O'Meara of sessions court. Beaulne, in whose apartment the tools were found, testified that he used them for making chairs.

VANCOUVER — Norman Hacking, former marine editor of The Province, has been named an honorary lifetime member of the British Columbia section of the Marine Technology Society. Will Lawther, a member of the society, said Hacking was chosen for his support of the aims and development of the international society since the B.C. division started in 1968.

TITO TURNS 75

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — President Josip Broz Tito turned 85 today amid nationwide celebrations honoring the peasant who rose to become the father of modern Yugoslavia.

Tito, who has led the nation's Communist party for 40 years, still is in exceptionally good health and is firmly at the helm in Yugoslavia.

Despite his age, Tito has kept a busy schedule in recent months. He attended three public functions Tuesday hailing his "exceptional merits" in war and peacetime.

A Dream of Blue and Gold

When the bluest of blue poppies opens to show the contrasting gold of massed stamens, I know that a couple of dozen plants would be more satisfying than the one, though no more beautiful.

This is the Himalayan Blue-poppy, Meconopsis betonicifolia Baileyi, so difficult to find in today's garden centers yet so easy to raise from fresh seed.

We used to see it and other species of Meconopsis growing in shaded corners at Beacon Hill Park, and several nurseries raised a stock of seedling plants in three-inch bands for sale each spring.

The seed was obtained from the odd plant or two kept at the nursery for the purpose of showing its beauty of color and form to spring customers and later for the harvest of viable seed which came from a couple of perfect flowers.

It was found that fresh seed, ripened by about the third or fourth week of June germinated, we claimed, 110 per cent.

In contrast to seed purchased from commercial distributors, the fresh seeds sown thinly over the surface of a 12 by 24-inch flat would come up almost like green chickweed. Seed even one year old gives poor if any germination.

This May after a gap of several years I again have a Blue-poppy. It was the single plant that came from seed of the Royal Horticultural Society's distributon in 1973.

Most of the Meconopsis species are normally of biennial habit.

That is, the plants die after blooming in the spring following the seed being sown. However, it was found that by removing the flower stem when first seen, the plant would form offshoots which would flower in succeeding years thus making the plants almost perennial. Time will tell about the one now flowering so well. There is a strong side growth with no sign of flowering. This presumably will bloom next year.

Now for the seed saving. When the blue petals fall I shall watch for signs of the seed pod swelling. It will then have a tag hung around the stem to prevent the careless removal of the pod when others on the same stem are promptly removed later. Only one pod will be allowed to a stem.

As the pod dries and before it opens, the stem will be cut and brought indoors to complete ripening as it stands in a drinking glass on a sunny windowsill. This is to be sure the seeds are not dampened by a rain shower or by watering, nor lost to a questing bird.

The seeds will finally come freely from the pod into the glass, and within 24 hours will be sown on the surface of a seedbox of finely screened compost with a little dampened screened peatmoss. A dusting of fine sand will go over the top to prevent damping off due to moisture rising around the hairy little leaves.

The box will go in a cool shaded spot outdoors to germinate and the dream of a patch of blue and gold Meconopsis poppies will again be nearer realization.

She is a Pacific Trawler, a new breed of pleasure cruiser that emphasizes cruising safety and stamina rather than fast speed. An enthusiastic owner summarizes, "A completely comfortable boat, accommodations for leisure travel. Her Ford diesel gets us there — surely — quietly — inexpensively. Enough power to meet a major storm head-on." A complete survey and demonstration is authorized.

The price is $89,500 which is well below valuation. THE DAWGS

Love the rambling one-level ranch style house with beamed ceilings, panelled walls, and Arizona Sandstone fireplace. The tremendous views of beautiful Royal Colwood Golf Course and especially its 100 foot patio for sunbathing and entertaining.
They have an indoor-outdoor run, and electric gate that can be released from master's bedroom. They have nearly an acre to romp on, two large lots, and over 300 feet lake frontage for swimming and rainbow trout fishing.
They also like to watch the many wildlife visitors, ducks, geese, otter, mink, quail, who come all year round.
Their folks don't have to work too hard to maintain things, so there is plenty of time and nearby places to walk. And they don't have to stand guard all night because there is a floodlight and monitoring system for added privacy.
The Dawgs will not be pleased to leave, but they did make friends with the appraiser who valued the house alone at $80,000, and they agreed the location and land values should be negotiated.
If anyone wants to talk it over with them, please phone 478-4169 for appointment.

SPELL IT OUT

When you have something to sell, the easiest way to find a buyer is to spell it out in print! You do that by placing a low-cost Classified Ad in the newspaper, telling our readers what you have to sell. We'll help you today. Give us a call at 386-2121

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer: the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday calls. Don't allow the reader to speculate

Catch Loss Protest

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Losses of millions of dollars in salmon catches are facing Canadian fishermen due to recent edict of the U.S. Pacific Regional Council.

The council has stipulated that certain fishing grounds, normally fished by both Canadian and U.S. trollers, be closed 12 weeks out of the 26-week fishery.

Members of the Pacific Trollers Association are irate over the action and say it is in direct conflict with the reciprocal agreement drawn up between the two countries this year and still to be ratified by the U.S.

PTA manager Fred Yeung, of Vancouver, said the Canadians have paid too high a price in the agreement.

He points out the Americans will be allowed to take 730 metric tons of shrimp from the Tofino area this year, fish a lot of ground fish off the west coast of Vancouver Island and have also retained their reciprocal salmon privileges in Canadian waters.

The Canadian and American fishermen claim the new boundary should not be the median line but follow the traditional natural contour of the Juan de Fuca Canyon, that starts in the Strait of Juan de Fuca and extends into the Pacific Ocean, as a natural extension of the Canadian land mass.

The median line means that Canadians have lost 600 miles of their traditional trolling grounds.

The American council has called closures in the area north of Tillamookhead from April 15-30, June 15-30, and after Sept. 15, although the season normally ends Oct. 31.

Yeung estimates Canadians lost at least $1 million in the two-week April closure. The remaining closures represent even greater losses as the salmon runs increase.

In addition, from midnight Tuesday the size of spring salmon allowed to be caught has been raised from 26 inches to 28 inches. Yeung said this means many fish normally caught will be lost to the trolling industry.

The American council, Yeung says, has ordered the closures so that the salmon may return to American rivers and estuaries, there to be caught by only American fishermen.

Not only does the move threaten Canadian fishermen, representing a loss of 30 to 35 per cent in catches, and put the reciprocal agreement in peril, it also penalizes the U.S. trolling fishery.

"They're strangling their own troll industry," Yeung said. "Pretty soon the only (U.S. troller) boat you'll see will be in a museum."

Yeung said the problem stems mainly from the fact the U.S. has no one department like Canada's fisheries department, charged with the protection and management of fisheries.

As an example, he said American non-Indian fishermen are fighting in the courts a recent edict that Indians be allowed to fish half of the stocks in Washington when they are far outnumbered by non-Indian fishermen.

Coast Guard Plays Host On Sunday

Free helicopter rides and boat tours of the harbor will be highlights of Canadian Coast Guard Day on Sunday in Victoria.

For the third consecutive year the coast guard base at 203 Harbor Road in the Inner Harbor will be open to the public from noon to 3 p.m.

The Douglas and the icebreaker Camsell will be alongside and open to the public.

There will be two flights by helicopter out to the Race Rocks lightstation and back, starting at 12:30 p.m. and 2 p.m. Passengers will be chosen by a draw, and there also will be continuous 10-minute flights around the city.

The 45-foot catamaran CCGS Catalite will be used for 30-minute tours of the harbor.

Free coffee and doughnuts will be available at the base where shore personnel will be on hand to explain the functions of all the department's special equipment. This ranges from telecommunications and search and rescue equipment to slick lickers and Bennett booms used to combat oil pollution.

Visitors will be able to see wind generators, such as those used at Brotchie Ledge; airchime fog alarms, solar panels used to power navigational aids, and be shown how various buoys work.

10 Years for Drug

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kam Sing Law, 22, of Hong Kong, was sentenced to 10 years in prison after pleading guilty in provincial court to importing two pounds of heroin and possessing the drug for trafficking.

Lambrick Area Revised Again

School board trustees have again revised the Lambrick Park high school enrolment area.

Trustees made the decision Tuesday, partially in acquiescence to parental pressure and because the current sluggish real estate market has left 100 newly-built homes unsold in the Gordon Head area.

An earlier decision to tighten the school boundaries was made in February when it became apparent the Gordon Head area was still growing.

Parents in one of the excluded areas — west of Shelbourne — wrote to the board asking that Grade 8 students who started at Lambrick be allowed to continue, rather than go to Cedar Hill.

And then the population growth didn't materialize.

The board was told as well as the 100 new houses still unsold, another 100 or more are for sale in Gordon Head.

Trustees decided to allow Grade 8's from west of Shelbourne to continue at Lambrick, and if there is still room, to allow Grade 8s from the south and east of Shelbourne to continue.

Trustee Peter Bunn wanted to know what would happen if the real estate market suddenly picked up again in the summer.

"Do we flip flop back again in September if the houses are occupied?"

But Fisher said school boundaries are subject to too many variables — zoning changes, an onslaught of multiple dwellings and the general economy.

"The only way to resolve it is to open the whole thing up and let them go at it," he suggested.

The parents had argued that the first year of high school is the most difficult, and as soon as the students got used to one school, they were being asked to change to another, and then would have to return to the first school for their senior grades.

Mackenzie Water Pact

EDMONTON (CP) — The federal, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Northwest Territories governments will sign an agreement on the Mackenzie River Basin in Saskatoon on May 31, federal and Alberta officials here say.

The agreement commits the five governments to consult each other before proceeding with any water resources developments in the watershed. However, it does not commit the parties to any cost-sharing arrangements.

Environment Minister Dave Russell will represent Alberta at the meeting, which will be followed by a conference of all Canadian resource ministers June 1-2.

Concorde Ban

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals continued Tuesday a stay preventing Concorde supersonic jet aircraft flights at Kennedy airport, pending a full formal appeal June 1.

FORSOOTH, he smites him with a mighty blow — or words to that effect. The occasion is a tournament at the University of Toronto staged by the Society for Creative Anachronism, whose 10,000 members celebrated across North America. This particular melee ended with an 11-course feast.

Alien Control Tightened With U.S. Identity Card

EIGHT DIED, and 10 were injured today, when fire gutted a seedy rooming house and sauna in a run-down section of midtown New York City. The blaze broke out in the Everard Bath, a four-storey building containing 100 tiny cubicles. Firemen feared others may be trapped and buried in the interior rubble.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acting as much from ignorance as knowledge, the government is preparing to deal with illegal aliens in ways that could affect not only the aliens and their employers but workers all over the United States.

The extent of the alien problem is unknown because, like an iceberg, the alien subculture in American society exists beneath the surface, out of sight of government surveys.

Nonetheless, the first major step in the government's campaign is beginning: the distribution of new "counterfeit proof" identity cards to the four million aliens who are legally entitled to live and work in the United States.

The new card cost $15 million to develop. It will take five years before it completely replaces the current "green card," which the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) says is too easily forged.

The new card has a photo, a fingerprint and a signature. The photo cannot be peeled off and replaced. Characteristics of the signature and fingerprint are encoded in a 50-digit identifying number that can be read by the INS computers.

The new card, or something like it, may be required of every American worker, not just aliens, before long under programs that are germinating in both Congress and the Carter administration.

Rep Joshua Eilberg, a Philadelphia Democrat who heads the House subcommittee on immigration, is sponsoring a bill aimed at penalizing employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. Under current laws, employers have no liability at all.

Opposition comes from people like Rep. Edward Roybal of Los Angeles, a leader of the congressional Hispanic caucus.

"People with Spanish surnames would be discriminated against because the employer would take the position that he just doesn't want to take a chance and wouldn't interview them for jobs," he says.

Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall concedes the fear of discrimination "is a legitimate concern. But there are ways to handle it." His solution is a new counterfeit-proof Social Security card for every American worker. All an employer would have to do to stay within the law is check for the card.

The INS study found that to be foolproof, the card needed a fingerprint and a photo, but Marshall is not convinced it would have to be that elaborate.

Marshall does not think there should be much resistance to the new card. "Every worker now has to have a Social Security card and the employer is supposed to require it. The only thing new is that we're going to make it so you can't counterfeit it."

But any proposal for turning the Social Security number into a mandatory identity system is bound to touch off a reaction from persons, like Eilberg, who "don't like a national identification system where Big Brother has all those names and all those numbers."

Roybal has introduced legislation to make it illegal to use the Social Security number for any purpose other than employment.

Roybal and the administration also are pressing for some form of amnesty for illegal aliens already in the country with clean records.

"There's no question that we will need an amnesty if this is to be an equitable program," says Leonel Castillo, the Mexican-American city comptroller of Houston whom the White House is preparing to nominate to head the INS.

No one knows how many people an amnesty might affect, because no one knows how many illegal aliens there are in the United States. The INS caught 750,000 last year, either at border points or in raids within the United States. Officials assume that for every alien who is caught, many more slip through.

Estimates of their number vary from four million to 12 million. Most, it is assumed, are from the Western Hemisphere and the largest number is from Mexico.

The unanswered question is whether the aliens are significant contributors to unemployment because they take jobs that would otherwise go to U.S. citizens.

Some do have good jobs. Eilberg's subcommittee recently interviewed a witness who said he made $8.45 per hour working on the construction of Washington's subway. He was caught by the INS only after Virginia police arrested him for driving his motorcycle without a license.

But many more apparently are doing the work that most Americans will not do. They wash dishes, clean homes and offices, and pick crops. They are often paid less than the minimum wage.

WOMEN TAKE TO DEFENCE

TORONTO (CP) — Single women living alone. Rape victims. Married women who attend night meetings. Battered wives. Schoolgirls. Older women who fear purse snatchers.

The list of females attending women's self-defence courses throughout Toronto includes all these categories and more.

Attacks on women have increased in number, says Metro Police Chief Harold Adamson. Purse-snatching happens almost daily.

The women's movement has had a strong influence towards self-defence. More and more women are asserting their right to their personal space.

Rape and domestic beatings are a violation of thatright. So is the insistent demand for sex from a date, an assault in a subway or a purse snatching. Even verbal abuse can qualify.

The YWCA offers courses in self-defence. Techniques are traditional. A swift front kick to the knees or groin of an assailant.

A smooth, solid-fist punch to the solar plexus—the soft spot just under the breastbone, between the ribs—makes an attacker double over and gasp for air.

If necessary, two fingers jabbed in a would-be rapist's eyes.

It is the attitudes that are new.

"What's important is how a woman feels about defending herself," said Susan Cockerton who teaches advanced self-defence courses.

"We ask mothers in the class what they would do if their child was attacked," she said. "Almost invariably they reply, 'Fight!' even 'Kill!'

"But when we ask them about themselves, there is fear and concern about difficulties of following through in a scuffle with a man."

Ms. Cockerton, who has worked with hundreds of women at the Rape Crisis Centre in Toronto said she is convinced that in many rape cases the woman had time enough to calm down, plan her move and fight back. What she lacked was the attitude that she had a right to defend herself.

Chief Adamson says that the first reaction in almost any assault situation should be a good scream—long and loud.

Thea Caplan, a 24-year-old social worker taking the YWCA course, said she wanted to learn self-defence as "another option than using my wits to get out of a tight situation."

"The most important thing is to make a split-second assessment—a good, loud yell might be enough. But I don't fear hurting someone.

"Anyone who interferes with my own personal space or person is in for all I can give them. If you are going to strike, the key is to do it right on. Be a fighting machine."

FAMILY APPROACH URGED ON LANGUAGE

MONTREAL (CP) — "Let's not have another War Measures Act, let's not have the guns, let's not have the federal government come in. Let's all be friends."

The speaker, an attractive middle-aged woman, was addressing Operation Pro-Canada, a public forum presented by the municipal association of Westmount, an affluent, almost exclusively English-speaking enclave of Montreal.

The woman, who said she had raised five bilingual children and had French-Canadian daughters-in-law, appealed for both language groups to sit down and work out their problems "like a family."

Panel member Stephen Scott, a constitutional law expert, advised the 150 people present to prepare for legislative harassment from the Parti Quebecois government by becoming fully bilingual.

The McGill University professor told the audience that he for one intended to become more bilingual and "thrive on the harassment."

Using the word "repressive" repeatedly, he was highly critical of Bill 1, which aims to make French the principle language of work in Quebec's schools, courts and businesses.

In the months to come, Canadians would realize that the provinces are extremely powerful and that there are "practically no constitutional guarantees" to limit their power, he said.

In reply to a question from one elderly man, Scott said the British North America Act contains practically no protection for Quebec's English-speaking senior citizens, who now are being asked to speak French.

The questioner said old people who didn't speak French had had money "thrown back in their faces" in stores and added that court action was being planned.

Bryce Mackasey, Liberal national assembly member for adjoining Notre Dame de Grace, said he felt the situation would be easier if English Quebecers "were to disappear like lemmings over a fall."

"But we're not going to."

Nixon Contradicts Friend in Fourth Interview

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Richard Nixon on television tonight contradicts the testimony of his friend and banker, Charles (Bebe) Rebozo, about the controversial campaign contributions of Howard Hughes, the eccentric billionaire.

Nixon, in the fourth of his TV interviews with David Frost, concedes he offered to use political campaign funds controlled by Rebozo to defray the legal expenses of his key aides, H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

When testifying before the Senate Watergate committee, Rebozo was asked about the Hughes cash contributions. Rebozo said Nixon told him in March of 1973, as the Watergate scandal began to engulf the president and his aides, that he must return the Hughes money. Rebozo also recalled that Nixon said it would have been wrong to use that money because it constituted campaign contributions.

Wednesday night, Nixon offers a different version.

A full months later, in April, he asked Haldeman and Ehrlichman to resign because of their Watergate involvement. Frost brings up that period, and then asks the former President about the "very generous offer" you made" to use the $300,000 for lawyer's fees from a fund that Rebozo had. When Frost asks Nixon what he had in mind there, Nixon replies:

"Well, as a matter of fact, I had in mind the campaign contribution that he received from Hughes . . ."

That incident forms one of many controversial episodes that Nixon addresses in the fourth interview which covers the overthrow of the Allende regime in Chile, the resignation of Vice President Spiro Agnew, the events surrounding his final days in office and his acceptance of a pardon after his own resignation.

In Wednesday night's program, Nixon makes a number of new assertions.

On the Agnew case: Nixon says that Elliott Richardson, then the attorney general, and Henry Petersen, in charge of the justice department's criminal division, both "strongly" said they would recommend a prison term for Agnew. Nixon takes a swipe at Richardson by saying "he was under considerable strain at that time because of his political ambitions."

On the final days: Nixon confirms many of the details previously reported in the book by Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, such as crying and praying alone with Heny Kissinger on the night before his resignation. But he implies the reporters' book may have contributed to Mrs. Nixon's stroke. "All I can say is Mrs. Nixon read it, and her stroke came three days later," he says. He also describes the reporters as "trash," and adds: "I will never forgive them. Never."

Viet Aid Claim Misses Point

WASHINGTON — (WP) — Vietnam's published version of Richard Nixon's promise of billions of U.S. postwar aid omits the single paragraph that notes that the U.S. Congress would have to approve any such aid.

State Department officials said Monday that the paragraph was transmitted to Hanoi according to their recores. They added that former secretary of state Henry Kissinger also orally informed the Vietnamese on several occasions of Congress' constitutionally mandated role.

An uncompromising Vietnamese commentary broadcast with the text of Hanoi's documents said the United States must fulfill "what it has signed and pledged."

The United States "cannot cite contradictions between the executive and legislative branches or the lack of approval by the legislative branch as an excuse for denying its commitments in foreign relatios," Hanoi said.

Hanoi's tone indicated that the second session of Carter administration talks with Vietnam on ways to normalise relations will be difficult.

Assistant secretary of state Richard Holebrooke will lead the U.S. delegation to the talks, which will begin in Paris June 2, the state department announced.

Vietnam continues to link normalization of diplomatic relations with U.S. aid. President Carter has said the United States will not provide aid as a precondition to normalization.

Nixon's Feb. 1, 1973 message promised about $3.25 billion in grant aid over five years and between $1 billion and $1.5 billion on other aid.

It was kept secret at the time and the full text was not published until the state department declassified it last week after prodding by Rep. Lester Wolff (Dem. - N.Y.).

REDWOOD SEEDLINGS were handed this Washington policeman by protesting California loggers who drove in convoy into Washington Tuesday. The loggers staged a demonstration on the steps of the Capitol to protest the expansion of the Redwood National Park.

Carter Meets Fahd

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says he has told Crown Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia that the United States is deeply committed to the security and peaceful existence of Israel and that the Arabs "undertand this very well."

Carter and Fahd hold their second day of talks today. The emphasis of their talks Tuesday was on solving the problem of the Palestinians.

At a White House dinner for the visiting prince Tuesday night the president said he has also told the Saudis that the United States is dedicated to a fair and permanent peace in the Middle East.

"In both these commitments the Saudi Arabians share our purpose," Carter told the dinner party.

Thanking Carter for a "realistic view and increased understanding" of the Middle East, Fahd said the greatest hindrance to stability in the region is the "displacement, destitution and expulsion" of the Palestinians.

SENATE REBELS

WASHINGTON (WP) — A rebellious Senate Tuesday defied veto threats and passed a farm bill costing billions more each year for corn and wheat price supports than President Carter has called acceptable. The vote was 69 to 18.

Before passage Senate Budget Committee Chairman Edmund Muew, (Dem.-Me.), failed by close votes (50 to 45) and 51 to 43 in two attempts to slash the price support levels in the bill back to what Carter wants.

Former GOP vice presidential candidate Bobv Dole (Rep.-Kans.), opposing Muskie, said "the administration is up here trying to beat down the farmer instead of trying to help the farmer."

Dole said that before the election Carter was promising the help the farmer and criticizing president Ford's veto of a similar bill.

N-FUEL OFFER

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter administration has decided to supply India with several months worth of U.S. uranium fuel for its big atomic power reactor on condition that the two countries open broad talks on their future nuclear relations.

Informed sources said the U.S. decision has been broached informally to New Delhi and will be officially proposed in the near future by the arriving U.S. ambassador, Robert Goheen.

A larger shipment of low-enriched uranium to fuel the U.S.-manufactured power reactor at Tarapur, India, has been held up for nearly a year due to concern about the country's atomic policies.

'We Want To Stay Alive . . .'

ASSEN (AP) — Captive children chanted "We want to stay alive!" today as South Moluccan extremists holding more than 160 hostages again threatened to kill them if the Dutch government did not meet their demands. A deadline for death passed without apparent incident, however.

Two hours before the deadline at 2 p.m. local time (5 a.m. PDT), several children were brought to the windows of the village school in nearby Bovensmilde where they have been held for two days. They cried out in unison, "We want to stay alive, Van Agt!".

Andries van Agt is the Dutch justice minister and the top government strategist in dealing with the gunmen.

Six men were holding 105 children and six teachers in the school. Seven other terrorists, one believed to be a woman, were holding at least 55 hostages on a hijacked train stopped in the middle of open pastureland 10 miles north of here.

Earlier today the Asian militants spoke with senior Dutch officials by telephone. They rejected a government appeal for release of the children and repeated their threat to shoot hostages.

The gunmen, members of an immigrant community from the former Dutch colony of the South Moluccan Islands, now part of Indonesia, were demanding release of 21 countrymen in jail for previous terrorist acts and a jumbo jet flight, with hostages, from Amsterdam to an undisclosed destination.

Some South Moluccans are serving terms in Dutch jails for using political violence in fruitless attempts to force the Dutch government to help them win independence from Indonesia for their homeland.

"If you dare not to meet our demands . . . we will not hesitate or bluff to shoot down a number of hostages for your pleasure," the terrorists said in a letter to Dutch authorities that was released Tuesday.

Justice ministry official Toos Faber said: "The terrorists see the children as their ace in the hole, their safeguard." She described the negotiations, conducted by telephone, as courteous and "businesslike."

The gunmen, who seized the school and train in twin attacks Monday, also threatened killings if mediation was attempted, if authorities did not meet the deadline or if there were reprisals against other South Moluccans.

A leader of the Moluccan community in the Netherlands, Dr. Theo Kuhuwael, a 63-year-old educator and civil servant, began a voluntary mediation effort Tuesday night, but had no immediate contact with the gunmen.

As Dutch voters went to the polls for national elections today, Prime Minister Joop Den Uyl conferred with Van Agt and other key ministers in The Hague.

Officials expressed growing concern for the condition and "mental state" of the young hostages, aged 6 to 12.

A source said at least three were known to be ill and were receiving medication sent in by police and administered by teachers held with the children in a classroom of the school.

Combat police and army troops, along with specially trained anti-terrorist units, ringed both locations. An undisclosed number of specialists from Britain's elite anti-terrorist Special Air Service regiment flew to the Netherlands today to "train and advise" the Dutch, it was announced in London.

BOBBIES GIVE MINISTER BUM'S RUSH

SCARBOROUGH, England (Reuter) — British policemen who normally maintain a sturdy silence and protect officialdom chanted "Get out, you bum!" and jostled a cabinet minister here today.

The target for the jeering chorus was Home Secretary Merlyn Rees who arrived to address a police federation conference.

The delegates, representing the 120,000-strong force, voted Tuesday to demand the right to strike, amid indications of growing anger about pay levels.

They have recently been awarded a five-per-cent rise, half the minimum they wanted.

In contrast to his noisy reception outside the conference hall, Rees's speech inside was heard in almost complete silence. Some delegates walked out.

Youths Gang Up, Rob Man

Saanich police are seeking a gang of youths who attacked and robbed a Richmond man early today in the Red Lion Inn parking lot.

A police spokesman said the man and two companions were confronted by the eight youths, one armed with a knife, when they left the beer parlor about 1:30 a.m.

The victim was knocked known, kicked in the head and robbed of $30.

The other two men were not harmed after telling the gang they had no money. Names of the trio are being withheld.

After taking the money, the eight jumped into two vans and sped off.

Police are investigating the possibility of a connection between the robbery and another incident late Tuesday night when an 18-year-old Victoria youth was picked up in the same parking lot by six men in a van. The youth was beaten up and then dumped near Beaver Lake.

A passing motorist spotted the youth staggering on the highway and took him to Saanich police station.

COBALT, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government Tuesday declared this town of 2,200 a disaster area and gave an unconditional $500,000 grant to begin cleaning up the rubble left by a fire Monday that destroyed 60 buildings.

Leo Bernier, northern affairs minister, and Rene Brunelle, provincial secretary for resources development, made the announcement after meeting town officials.

Bernier told a news conference, that the province also will more than match money raised by the town's disaster relief committees.

School Boycott Continues

NELSON (CP) — A boycott of schools in South Slocan entered its second week Tuesday as three elementary schools had an attendance of 30 out of 233 registered students.

The boycott in the South Slocan area, 15 miles west of here, began last Wednesday when parents protested the school board's decision to demote Alex Pereverzoff from principal to teacher in area schools.

Pereverzoff is principal of three elementary schools which will be consolidated into a new building in September. The school board hired an Abbotsford man to become principal of the new school.

Neither the school board nor the education ministry plans to take action to end the boycott.

"The ministry takes a dim view of children being kept out of school," a spokesman for the ministry said in a telephone interview from Victoria on Tuesday.

"We're continuing to keep an eye on the situation but the ministry is reluctant to intervene in school board decisions."

Teachers at the three elementary schools have supported the protest by parents in advertisements in area newspaper.

Parents picketed the new school for three days last week and stopped construction.

PM SPIKES ELECTION TALK

Grits Cheer Victory, Tories Grim at Loss

Times News Services

The Liberal party swept to victory in five of six federal byelections Tuesday, maintaining four Quebec seats and taking one away from the Conservatives in Prince Edward Island. Rumors that Liberal sweep would bring a fall federal election, however, were spiked by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The PM cooled election fever Tuesday night in Ottawa by saying he had not been close to calling a general election before the byelections and was no closer now.

Conservative leader Joe Clark insisted his job is not on the line following his party's defeats. But his MPs were grim-faced as they watched the results come in on Commons television sets and his chief Quebec spokesman, Claude Wagner, had no comment on the outcome.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde, however, said the poor Conservative showing indicated that "the leadership of Joe Clark is already to weak that I'm asking myself: 'What's left?'"

Both he and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said Conservatives will have to decide whether to keep the 37-year-old Clark as leader. The party holds a convention at Quebec City in November and a leadership review is on the agenda automatically.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons following the byelections: Liberals 141, Progressive Conservatives 95, New Democrats 16, Social Credit 11, Independent 1.

Onl Temiscamingue riding, which elected Social Credit candidate Gilles Caouette, stood in the way of a clean sweep for the Liberals in Quebec.

Three of the four Quebec seats retained by the Liberals are in ridings which elected Parti Quebecois members in election.

The Liberal upset in Prince Edward Island came in the riding of Malpeque where Donald Wood won a narrow victory over Conservative Ian MacQuarrie, breaking a 25-year Tory stranglehold on the seat.

Liberal candidates won convincingly in the two Quebec City ridings of Louis Hebert and Langelier and the Montreal area ridings of Verdun and Terrebonne.

Although the Conservatives increased their share of the popular vote in the five Quebec ridings to 26 per cent from 15 per cent, they failed to make the showing that Clark expected after extensive personal campaigning in the province.

The Liberal percentage in the six ridings went to 58.5 from 56.6 in 1974 while the Social Credit showing was halved to 8.3 per cent as the party all but disappeared in some Quebec ridings.

Premier Rene Levesque, whose Parti Quebecois ran Robert Bourassa's Liberal government out of office last Nov. 15, said the byelection vote showed the inability of other federal parties to challenge the Liberals in Quebec.

Interviewed during a conference at La Malbaie, Que., Levesque noted the victory in Terrebonne of Roland Comtois, 48, who was trounced by a PQ candidate in the provincial election after resigning as MP to run provincially, but won back his federal seat.

Bus Fare Hike 'Slap in Face'

B.C. Ferries Corporation director Graeme Roberts said today the decision by Pacific Stage Lines to increase their bus fares 50 cents on the day the ferry rates went down one dollar is "a slap in the face to the travelling public."

Roberts said he will ask questions at the ferry board meeting next week to find out why one government transportation service was raising rates while another was lowering them.

"There is a lack of co-ordination here that concerns me. The premier publicly announces a reduction in the ferry rates and then the bus company quietly raises its rates by 50 cents, which cut the value of the reduction."

A one dollar reduction in ferry rates would have reduced the cost of a Victoria-Vancouver bus ride to $5.25 on June 1 but the 50-cent bus fare increase raises this to $5.75.

In Nanaimo, the home city of Roberts, the cost of a trip from Vancouver to Nanaimo was scheduled to be reduced to $3.95 on June 1 but will, in fact, be $4.45 because of the 50-cent increase in the bus fare.

"This bus fare increase came as a complete surprise to me. We had worked many months for a reduction in the ferry rates and then they raise the bus fares on us."

He said the B.C. Ferry Corporation board of directors could not lodge an official protest because the bus service is outside its terms of reference.

"But we can ask questions. Especially about the lack of co-ordination between government departments."

Roberts said another item certain to be on the agenda for next week's meeting (the date has not been set) is the quality of food on the ferries?

The main problem, he said, is a lack of variety on the menu. There has been some improvement in the service in the past month but there is a long way to go, he said.

The ferry cafeteria has produced a continuing flood of complaints, he said.

Roberts, who had urged the fare for car and driver be reduced to $10.50 from $14, said the reduction to $12 is gratifying but not necessarily the end.

However, the fare question would not be raised at the board meeting, except as it relates to the bus increase.

U.S. Tourist Boom Seen for Victoria

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

"Victoria is going to get a whole lot of tourists this summer," predicts the executive vice president of the Portland Chamber of Commerce and director of the tourist bureau.

"We have never had so many requests for ferry schedules. It is going to be very busy in Victoria this summer, you can be sure of that," said Oliver Larson.

Larson, in a telephone interview, said the tourist drop last summer was due to a number of factors, one of which are present this year.

"There was the increase in the ferry fares along with the things that were happening down here in Oregon. The economy was bad last year. Nobody wanted to travel very far. Now things are really picking up. I don't know what President Carter has done but I have never seen such mass optimism before. Everybody believes times are getting better."

Officials in Seattle tourist offices also report a flood of inquiries about attractions in Victoria. They project a sharp increase in the flow of visitors to Victoria this summer.

One official of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce estimated the increase could be as high as 15 to 20 per cent, based upon the number of enquiries coming into the chamber office.

Larson said it should come as no surprise that Portlanders are planning to come to Victoria.

"We ahve taken surveys and Victoria ranks very high as a tourist destination for people in Oregon. In fact, for family trips, Victoria ranks second to California. You know, Disneyland and all that.

"More families go to Victoria than visit Crater Lake Park (which is in Oregon)."

Victoria does not have much of an image as a swinging city, however.

"I must add that Victoria is nowhere on the list for young people. Singles, young couples, the swinging crowd. Their number one choice is San Francisco, followed closely by Las Vegas. If they are going up to Canada they will select Vancouver.

AREA POLICE PLAN LIE DETECTOR UNIT

A police polygraphy section for lie detection will be established in Greater Victoria in six months to a year, Police Chief Jack Gregory informed the Victoria Police Board today.

Gregory did not say under which law enforcement agency the section would be set up and gave no more details of the proposal, which he said had been relayed to him "in a confidential manner."

The board chairman, Mayor Mike Young, welcomed the news. At the present time a polygraph operator has to be brought over from Vancouver, sometimes by helicopter, and the arrangement is "very expensive," he said.

"I don't think it is unreasonable to suggest that one polygraph operator is needed on Vancouver Island," he said.

LONG EGG WAR FINALLY OVER

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Arnold Link ended 10 years of struggle against the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board Tuesday by giving away about 3,000 of his hens.

Link said he expected to wrap up the disposal of his assets today. He recently sold an Okanagan egg farm his quota allotment right to have 14,000 birds and produce 200 cases of eggs a week.

There are 30 dozen egs in a case.

Six thousand hens were sold with the quota for a price Link said would pay all his bills accrued in battles with the marketing board during the last decade. Link has argued that interior producers need more protection from cheap egg supplies imported from the lower mainland.

Link is keeping about 500 hens for income and is giving away the remainder on a first-come, first-served basis.

Link limited customers to 20 chickens a family and his farm 10 miles west of Prince George was the scene of a steady procession of chicken-lovers carting away their booty in sacks, bags and cardboard boxes.

Northern Tier Plan 'Deficient'

OLYMPIA (AP) — Northern Tier Pipeline Co.'s application for Washington state permission to build an oil superport has "serious deficiencies," the energy facility site evaluation council has been told.

Jack Christofferson, a Seattle consultant, told the state council that Northern Tier has failed to provide a study of site alternatives and a complete look at the environmental impact of the project.

The Montana-based consortium wants to build a port at Port Angeles, a tank farm in Clallam county and a pipeline from Port Angeles around Puget Sound and east to the Northern Tier states.

The consulting firm, hired by the council, said "a great deal of work" must be done by Northern Tier.

Gordon Conger, the consortium's attorney, said later that the deficiencies were due to the council's adoption of regulations after the application was submitted. The extra information will be submitted before the consulting firm makes its final report to the council June 16, he said.

The council is trying to decide whether to require a formal environmental impact statement before beginning hearings on the proposal.

No Vote Upsets Teamsters

KELOWNA (CP) — Okanagan teamsters union members, who are upset because they weren't given the opportunity to vote on the formation of an interior local, said Tuesday night they will approach the Labor Relations Board to get more say in union activities.

Formation of the interior local was approved by the executive board of the International Teamsters Union following an application from three local union officials.

Jack Vahovlick, secretary-manager of the old local 213, said the creation of the new interior local is an interference with the right of union members.

Four Campuses Seen Impractical by SFU

BURNABY (CP) — A plan to establish four interior university campuses in the province is impractical because the range of courses offered would be too limited, a Simon Fraser University study of the proposal has concluded.

The university's report, prepared by a committee of administrators and professors, says a "distance-learning" system of correspondence courses would be better than interior campuses remote from students.

The university agreed in principle last December to accept responsibility for setting up university programs in non-metropolitan areas as recommended by the government-appointed Winegard Commission.

"The committee has not felt itself bound to follow the Winegard proposals in detail," the committee said in releasing its report last week.

The committee "does not believe that the best interests of the interior can be met by setting up small SFUS at particular locations," the report added.

"In the first place, many potential students are not within commuting distance of these centres and, secondly, the range of courses . . . must inevitably be very limited."

Instead, the report recommends a sophisticated correspondence teaching system backed up by seminars, intensive short courses and tutorials at specific locations.

The committee also recommended that interior programs be linked to community college facilities and local advisory groups to relate courses to local interests.

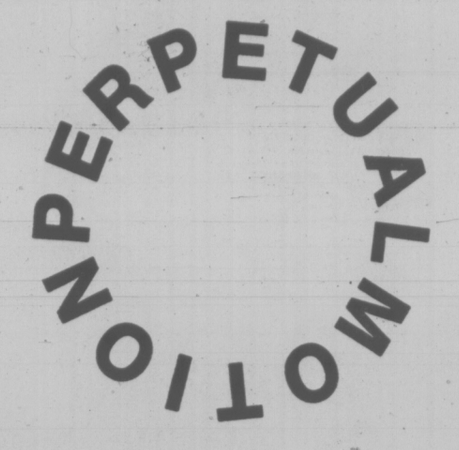
INVENTORS:

They Never Stop Their Quest for PM



By AB KENT
Times Staff

Perpetual motion — permanent solution of the energy crisis — but unfortunately a myth.

Down at the Bureau of Intellectual Property the nearest thing to perpetual motion are the recurring attempts by otherwise sane inventors to patent perpetual motion machines.

The Bureau of Intellectual Property?

Sounds like government thought control, but it's just another federal inspiration to lump the patent office, trademarks, copyright and industrial design licensing under one title.

Don Campbell, a technical advisory services officer from the bureau, visited Victoria and explained the various services and the wonderful world of inventions.

Despite the fact the laws of physics rule out perpetual motion, people still try to get PM plans patented.

Patent application examiners don't always try to explain the impossibility of perpetual motion, said Campbell. "They say 'just bring us a working model.' It's the only time we ask for a working model of anything."

And it works. The inventors go away and usually are never heard from again.

But inventors are a much maligned lot, says Campbell, and Canadians with their customary reticence have failed to accord their technological heroes with the recognition they deserve.

"Too many people think of inventors as funny little men who work in basements and wear beanies with lights on them," says Campbell.

Today, an inventor may be a highly paid person employed by government or industry, someone who does industrial design work full time or gifted people with innovative ideas from many walks of life.

Over the 186 years since the first Canadian patent was issued, the world has seen a steady stream of useful inventions — and some no so useful — registered by the Ottawa patent office.

Canadians have been responsible for the variable pitch aircraft propeller which helped revolutionize the air transport industry, the ubiquitous power toboggan, the television camera, the panoramic camera, the cobalt bomb, the anti-gravity flying suit, kerosene, carbide, the first practical electron microscope and the rotary snow shovel.

Then there were patents for a reverse cooking stove submitted by a woman in 1855 — the first Canadian woman to be granted a patent — and a 1926 cure-all made from carrots.

One of the weirdest inventions to be granted a patent, Campbell thinks, was a cast iron dirigible which was supposed to become airborne by exhaustion of all the air inside it. But to make it withstand external air pressure it had to be made too heavy to leave earth.

It was one of many concepts for which patent protection is granted but which never saw the light of day. But a far more common reason for new ideas disappearing from home soil is that 90 per cent of Canadian patents go abroad for development — or suppression.

"We are the sort of people who buy insurance rather than investing in factories," Campbell notes.

Because Canadian business is less aggressive and has a relatively small industrial base, multi-national corporations often acquire the rights to new inventions. For example, a new plastic developed by a Canadian subsidiary which used silica to make it light and strong, was considered a breakthrough in the plastics industry.

But, Campbell said, the firm's parent company killed it because it threatened an existing material already manufactured by the firm.

A famous development that helped Canada and the University of Toronto where it was discovered in 1921 has been in use around the world ever since.

That was insulin for the treatment of diabetes. On the patent documents dated Jan. 12-15, 1923, are the names of Frederick Banting (later knighted for his work), Charles Best and J.B. Collip, who shared in the invention of a process that would render animal-derived insulin safe for humans.

The form assigns the rights to the University of Toronto which has licensed insulin for manufacture everywhere. It also shows that patent fees in 1923 were a total $35. Today the same document would cost $350.

Campbell, an engineer, was one of 170 patent examiners drawn from the ranks of chemists, physicists and engineers who screen each application exhaustively. They find no shortage of original thinkers, and a fair amount of unoriginal effort.

There are often visitors to the patent office who say they want to look at patents, without any elaboration.

Campbell said they obviously have never been there before and have no idea of the extent of the patent commission's filing system, so the staff tries to break through the secrecy barrier and finally are able to concentrate the search on a particular area.

And frequently they are able to show the prospective patentee his idea is far from an original conception.

"Sometime they go away very discouraged," Campbell said.

People never seem to tire of some ideas.

"There must be 120 different kinds of sealer lid and bottle cap remover among the patents."

They can also reflect the degree of economic prosperity. Home canning devices were big before the Second World War when times were hard and money short. Then they faded with post-war prosperity and now are coming back with unemployment and the trend to conservation.

Coal-handling devices are another example. They were very big until coal fuel was supplanted by oil and for 30 years there were almost no patents granted for coal machinery.

Today, along with new ideas for wind-powered electrical generators, the patent office is back in the coalfields.

A major objective of the department of consumer and corporate affairs is to raise the awareness of Canadian business, particularly small business, to technological developments that will help them in the marketplace.

Campbell said the Bureau of Intellectual Property also tries to protect unsophisticated business from invention hustlers who take advantage of new ideas, products and processes.

There have been a number of improvements introduced since the bureau came under the direction of consumer and corporate affairs. But the name was a bit hard to swallow.

"When we were first tagged with it we almost choked," Campbell said. "We are not a reichsministry of propoganda, nor do we sell real estate to intellectuals.

"Patents, trademarks, copyright and industrial design registration are all established (to provide inventors and others) with defined rights in law for the products of their intellect."

And getting it done is easier than ever. Since last fall it has not been necessary to go to Ottawa to get a patent or to deal at long distance with a patent attorney.

Patent applications may be filed at regional offices of the consumer and corporate affairs department in Vancouver, Winnipeg, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax.

But it still may take up to 30 months — perhaps longer in special cases — before applications are thoroughly screened.

B.C. to Seek U.S. Ferry Continuation

The provincial government will pressure Governor Dixy Lee Ray to continue the Anacortes ferry beyond the cutoff date of January, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said today.

"The onus is on the Washington State government to continue their ferry service," she said.

"They have a responsibility to their own citizens and to the people in Sidney."

McCarthy, head of the provincial department of travel, was commenting on a decision Tuesday by the Washington State Toll Bridge Authority to cancel the Anacortes-Sidney run in January.

In the meantime, they also decided to switch to the 100-car ferry the Evergreen State to replace the 160-car vessel, Kaleetan, which will be used on a Puget Sound route.

The unanimous decision by the authority was a compromise between Governor Ray, who wanted the service ended June 18, and a number of protest groups, including the B.C. government, who wanted it continued indefinitely.

The six-month delay was a partial victory, Mrs. McCarthy said.

"This will give us a breathing space to return to the question without the emotions of an early deadline. This will give groups in Washington State time to make their case forcefully to their own governor. I believe the onus is on them to continue the service and I am hopeful they will take a second look."

Sidney Mayor Dick Leigh said the unanimous vote by the toll bridge authority "looks pretty final." He said only the British Columbia government could continue an adequate service when the Washington State ferry service is dropped.

Sidney Chamber of Commerce president Hank Vissers agreed.

In Anacortes, Lon Rydberg has formed the Puget Sound Navigation Co. Ltd. and has made inquiries about the costs of leasing the B.C. ferry Queen of Tsawwassen.

'Backs Are Up' On Civic Front

Times Staff

Touchy relations between municipal employers and employees have been further strained by reports of proposed salary increases averaging about seven per cent for non-union staff at Victoria City Hall.

The added tension comes at a time when plans are being made for further talks between six locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

A tentative agreement on the increases for 26 non-union people was hammered out last Thursday at a closed meeting of city council's personnel committee.

City manager Jim Bramley said today the average increase for the group is 6.97 per cent.

A CUPE spokesman said the union members' "backs are up" because they have been told by GVLRA negotiator Carl Anshelm that six per cent is the maximum allowable this year.

Bramley said the non-union agreement will be put to council in the form of recommendations from the committee.

If accepted the increases would be 6.23 per cent for department heads, 7.46 per cent for deputies, assistants and professional employees and eight per cent for confidential secretaries.

However, Bramley said a clerk typist, a member of the inside workers union which has settled with the GVLRA, received a total increase of 8.96 per cent.

This consists of a basic six per cent allowed under the federal guidelines plus 2.96 resulting from the folding in of a cost-of-living allowance.

Members of the City Hall outside staff have been offered 8.29 per cent, he said, based on the flat six per cent plus 2.29 from the folding in of COLA.

Anshelm said today the guidelines take into account the employee's salary experience over the past two years. He said the non-union people were merely catching up to the CUPE members.

He said the CUPE workers made an average 44 per cent increase in their salaries between 1974 and 1976.

Ald. Larry Ryan, chairman of the personnel committee, said today the proposed increases to the non-union people were legal but he wasn't happy with them.

He said he will look deeper into why the group didn't get what they were allowed under the guidelines last year.

He said he doens't regard the proposed salary increase as firm because they have yet to be approved by council. No approval will be given until the CUPE contracts are settled, he added.

Bob Cunningham, spokesman for the CUPE locals' joint bargainig committee, said the employees' backs are up because the employers preach restraint and yet hand out such large increases to non-union staff.

"The administration takes the cream and the workers get what is left over," he said.

The joint negotiating committee met Tuesday and decided to have mediator Ed Sims arrange further meetings with the GVLRA. A meeting has been planned for Monday.

Where Do You Find Seclusion?

Secluded camping spots are beoming hard to find because of significant increase in wilderness camping on the West Coast Trail between Port Renfrew and Bamfield, Lloyd Brooks, deputy minister of recreation and conservation, said Tuesday.

Brooks, who took a small group of scientists camping on the 45-mile trail over the Victoria Day weekend, said once isolated beaches along the trail are now extensively used.

He said it reflected the increase in the number of people who have switched from "car camping" to wilderness camping.

"A few years ago only a few Canadians and Europeans would be found camping on these beaches," he said.

He took his group to what he thought was a secluded beach about four miles south of Pachena Bay, near Bamfield.

"The downhill access from the trail is difficult and we thought we would find no one there," he said. "But to our surprise we found 35 people camping on the beach."

The Barkleys Keep On Shuckin'

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

DENMAN ISLAND — Ma Barkley brought the kids over from Union Bay on the holiday weekend and they did pretty much what the oyster-shucking clan expected.

Len finished first, breaking his last year's record, thereby establishing a "world record"; sister Pat fooled brother Ken, (second last year and winner two years ago), knocking him back to third. Ma (Barb) Barkley was fourth.

The other competitors at the Denman Island World Championship Oyster Shucking contest were really shooting for fifth spot because once the Barkley family starts shuckin', there's no one in the world can touch 'em.

Twenty-one-year-old Len, a professional shucker for Sowcap Oysters Co. in Union Bay, actually shucked fewer oysters than last year when he separated 62 bivalve molluscs from their shells.

But last year he wielded the razor sharp oyster knife a trifle too quickly and nicked (culled to the pros) 12 of the chubby squish, leaving a net total of 50.

"I decided to go a little slower this year, and I guess it paid off," he said before picking up his $100 cheque.

A little slower, but not much. Len pried open 61 oysters in the five-minute period without nicking any.

Although he claims there is no fraternal rivalry, Len said he was a little surprised his older brother Ken fell to third with 53 shucked (also no culls).

"He started work at an auto body shop. I guess he lost his touch."

Sister Pat has been improving steadily each year and her 56 shucked, one cull, for 55 total was a strong second place.

Pat works for Mac's Oysters of Fanny Bay.

Like winning son Len, mother Barb works for Snowcap. This year she whipped open 47 oysters with two culls for a 45 and fourth-place finish.

What's it like to bring in that first place cheque?

"Yeah, it's pretty nice. It'll buy a lot of beer."

Speed, precision and a degree of caution are needed to pry open the strongest of the bivalves. West Coast oysters are big, and they clam up tightly when someone wants them open.

The special oyster knife must be inserted in the convoluted edge between the shells far enough to get some leverage but not so far it cuts the meat.

The knife is carefully scraped along one half inside the shell to cut one muscle to make the shell pop open, and then it's simply a matter of running the knife under the other muscle and dumping the treasure into the bucket.

That first step is crucial. It takes a fair bit of pressure to get the knife in, and although there were no mishaps this year, there have been festivals where a rubber glove full of blood has been a competitor's only trophy.

Bystanders ring the competition platform and cheer their favorites while chewing on juicy oyster burgers with tartar sauce, or barbecued oysters wrapped in bacon slices.

Even those who profess not to like oysters are tempted during the Denman festival.

It may have been a brave man that ate the first one, but on the May 24th long weekend on Denman, everybody digs in.

Oyster shuckers, when they're not in high speed competitions, can still turn them out of their shells at a pretty fair clip.

The oyster-shucking machine is yet to be invented, so theyre all hand-shucked. Back at the Union Bay plant, Len says he hand-shucks 20 to 25 gallons of oysters a day.

At about 120 oysters to the gallon, that's slipping the old oysters out at a rate of 300 an hour.

Trial Ordered for Ex-ICBC Man Charged with $5,950 Fraud

A former Insurance Corporation of B.C. employee has been ordered to stand trial on charges of defrauding ICBC of $5,950.

Judge William Ostler made the order following a preliminary hearing in provincial court Tuesday.

Randy Alexander Haughey, 27, now residing in Manitoba, pleaded not guilty when he appeared in court Feb. 9 charged with two counts of fraud.

The charge alleges he defrauded ICBC of $2,800 on March 11, 1976 and $3,150 on April 22, 1976.

Haughey, who is free on $5,000 surety bail, elected trial by judge and jury.

He was represented at the hearing by Victoria lawyer George Jones.

Ask the Times

Q. Can you please tell me the difference between a copyright and a patent? G.S.

A. In Canada a patent is granted by the government to an inventor to protect his invention from sale, manufacture or use by others, and an invention is described as any new an useful process, machine or matter, or improvement thereto. Its valid life is 17 years, non-renewable. A copyright is intended to protect on behalf of the author any original literary, musical, dramatic or artistic work for 50 years beyond the life of the author. In addition, Canada licenses industrial design of products intended to convey an esthetic effect, for five years renewable for five years. And also granted is exclusive use of a trademark for 15 years, renewable each 15 years indefinitely.

THE DAWGS

. . . Love the rambling one-level ranch style house with beamed ceilings, panelled walls, and Arizona Sandstone fireplace. The tremendous views of beautiful Royal Colwood Golf Course and especially the 100 foot patio for sunbathing and entertaining.

They have an indoor-outdoor run, and electric gate that can be released from master's bedroom. They have nearly an acre to romp on, two large lots, and over 200 feet lake frontage for swimming and rainbow trout fishing.

They also like to watch the many wildlife visitors, ducks, geese, otter, mink, quail, who come all year round.

Their folks don't have to work too hard to maintain things, so there is plenty of time and nearby places to walk. And they don't have to stand guard all night because there is a floodlight and monitoring system for added privacy.

The Dawgs will not be pleased to leave, but they did make friends with the appraiser who valued the house alone at $80,000, and they agreed the location and land values should be negotiated.

If anyone wants to talk it over with them, please phone 478-4169 for appointment.

THE DAWGS

Love the rambling one-level ranch style house with beamed ceilings, panelled walls, and Arizona Sandstone fireplace. The tremendous views of beautiful Royal Colwood Golf Course and especially the 100 foot patio for sunbathing and entertaining.

They have an indoor-outdoor run, and electric gate that can be released from master's bedroom. They have nearly an acre to romp on, two large lots, and over 200 feet lake frontage for swimming and rainbow trout fishing.

They also like to watch the many wildlife visitors, ducks, geese, otter, mink, quail, who come all year round.

Their folks don't have to work too hard to maintain things, so there is plenty of time and nearby places to walk. And they don't have to stand guard all night because there is a floodlight and monitoring system for added privacy.

The Dawgs will not be pleased to leave, but they did make friends with the appraiser who valued the house alone at $80,000, and they agreed the location and land values should be negotiated.

If anyone wants to talk it over with them, please phone 478-4169 for appointment.

'We Want To Stay Alive . . .'

ASSEN (AP) — Captive children chanted "We want to stay alive!" today as South Moluccan extremists holding more than 160 hostages again threatened to kill them if the Dutch government did not meet their demands. A deadline for death passed without apparent incident, however.

Two hours before the deadline at 2 p.m. local time (5 a.m. PDT), several children were brought to the windows of the village school in nearby Bovensmilde where they have been held for two days. They cried out in unison, "We want to stay alive, Van Agt."

Andries van Agt is the Dutch justice minister and the top government strategist in dealing with the gunmen.

Six men were holding 105 children and six teachers in the school. Seven other terrorists, one believed to be a woman, were holding at least 55 hostages on a hijacked train stopped in the middle of open pastureland 10 miles north of here.

Earlier today the Asian militants spoke with senior Dutch officials by telephone. They rejected a government appeal for release of the children and repeated their threat to shoot hostages.

The gunmen, members of an immigrant community from the former Dutch colony of the South Moluccan Islands, now part of Indonesia, were demanding release of 21 countrymen in jail for previous terrorist acts and a jumbo jet flight, with hostages, from Amsterdam to an undisclosed destination.

Some South Moluccans are serving terms in Dutch jails for using political violence in fruitless attempts to force the Dutch government to help them win independence from Indonesia for their homeland.

"If you dare not to meet our demands . . . we will not hesitate or bluff to shoot down a number of hostages for your pleasure," the terrorists said in a letter to Dutch authorities that was released Tuesday.

Justice ministry official Toos Faber said: "The terrorists see the children as their ace in the hole, their safeguard." She described the negotiations, conducted by telephone, as courteous and "businesslike."

The gunmen, who seized the school and train in twin attacks Monday, also threatened killings if mediation was attempted, if authorities did not meet the deadline or if there were reprisals against other South Moluccans.

A leader of the Moluccan community in the Netherlands, Dr. Theo Kuhuwael, a 63-year-old educator and civil servant, began a voluntary mediation effort Tuesday night, but had no immediate contact with the gunmen.

As Dutch voters went to the polls for national elections today, Prime Minister Joop Den Uyl conferred with Van Agt and other key ministers in The Hague.

Officials expressed growing concern for the condition and "mental state" of the young hostages, aged 6 to 12.

A source said at least three were known to be ill and were receiving medication sent in by police and administered by teachers held with the children in a classroom of the school.

Combat police and army troops, along with specially trained anti-terrorist units, ringed both locations. An undisclosed number of specialists from Britain's elite anti-terrorist Special Air Service regiment flew to the Netherlands today to "train and advise" the Dutch, it was announced in London.

Police tightened security as

BOBBIES GIVE MINISTER BUM'S RUSH

SCARBOROUGH, England (Reuter) — British policemen who normally maintain a sturdy silence and protect officialdom chanted "Get out, you bum!" and jostled a cabinet minister here today.

The target for the jeering chorus was Home Secretary Merlyn Rees who arrived to address a police federation conference.

The delegates, representing the 120,000-strong force, voted Tuesday to demand the right to strike, amid indications of growing anger about pay levels.

They have recently been awarded a five-per-cent rise, half the minimum they wanted.

In contrast to his noisy reception outside the conference hall, Rees's speech inside was heard in almost complete silence. Some delegates walked out.

Youths Gang Up, Rob Man

Saanich police are seeking a gang of youths who attacked and robbed a Richmond man early today in the Red Lion Inn parking lot.

A police spokesman said the man and two companions were confronted by the eight youths, one armed with a knife, when they left the beer parlor about 1:30 a.m.

The victim was knocked known, kicked in the head and robbed of $50.

The other two men were not harmed after telling the gang they had no money. Names of the trio are being withheld.

After taking the money, the eight jumped into two vans and sped off.

Police are investigating the possibility of a connection between the robbery and another incident late Tuesday night when an 18-year-old Victoria youth was picked up in the same parking lot by six men in a van. The youth was beaten up and then dumped near Beaver Lake.

A passing motorist spotted the youth staggering on the highway and took him to Saanich police station.

PAYOFF BARED

WASHINGTON (Reuter)—A report from a Canadian company made public today by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission says the former chairman of Asamera Oil Corp. paid $43,000 to Indonesian officials between 1965 and 1976.

The report also said the chairman, Thomas Brook, kept a secret bank account in Bermuda.

Asamera, based in Calgary, said Brook resigned May 2 and has agreed to pay the company $845,513 in exchange for a promise not to sue him.

School Boycott Continues

NELSON (CP) — A boycott of schools in South Slocan entered its second week Tuesday as three elementary schools had an attendance of 30 out of 233 registered students.

The boycott in the South Slocan area, 15 miles west of here, began last Wednesday when parents protested the school board's decision to demote Alex Pereverzoff from principal to teacher in area schools.

Pereverzoff is principal of three elementary schools which will be consolidated into a new building in September. The school board hired an Abbotsford man to become principal of the new school.

Neither the school board nor the education ministry plans to take action to end the boycott.

"The ministry takes a dim view of children being kept out of school," a spokesman for the ministry said in a telephone interview from Victoria on Tuesday.

"We're continuing to keep an eye on the situation but the ministry is reluctant to intervene in school board decisions."

Teachers at the three elementary schools have supported the protest by parents in advertisements in area newspaper.

Parents picketed the new school for three days last week and stopped construction.

PM SPIKES ELECTION TALK

Grits Cheer Victory, Tories Grim at Loss

Times News Services

The Liberal party swept to victory in five of six federal byelections Tuesday, maintaining four Quebec seats and taking one away from the Conservatives in Prince Edward Island. Rumors that Liberal sweep would bring a fall federal election, however, were spiked by Prime Minister Trudeau.

The PM cooled election fever Tuesday night in Ottawa by saying he had not been close to calling a general election before the byelections and was no closer now.

Conservative leader Joe Clark insisted his job is not on the line following his party's defeats. But his MPs were grim-faced as they watched the results come in on Commons television sets and his chief Quebec spokesman, Claude Wagner, had no comment on the outcome.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde, however, said the poor Conservative showing indicated that "the leadership of Joe Clerk is already so weak that I'm asking myself: 'What's left?'"

Both he and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said Conservatives will have to decide whether to keep the 37-year-old Clark as leader. The party holds a convention at Quebec City in November and a leadership review is on the agenda automatically.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons following the byelections: Liberals 141, Progressive Conservatives 95, New Democrats 16, Social Credit 11, Independent 1.

Only Temiscamingue riding, which elected Social Credit candidate Gilles Caouette, stood in the way of a clean sweep for the Liberals in Quebec.

Three of the four Quebec seats retained by the Liberals are in ridings which elected Parti Quebecois members in November.

The Liberal upset in Prince Edward Island came in the riding of Malpeque where Donald Wood won a narrow victory over Conservative Ian MacQuarrie, breaking a 25-year Tory stranglehold on the seat.

Liberal candidates won convincingly in the two Quebec City ridings of Louis Hebert and Langelier and the Montreal area ridings of Verdun and Terrebonne.

Although the Conservatives increased their share of the popular vote in the five Quebec ridings to 26 per cent from 15 per cent, they failed to make the showing that Clark expected after extensive personal campaigning in the province.

The Liberal percentage in the six ridings went to 58.5 from 56.6 in 1974 while the Social Credit showing was halved to 8.3 per cent as the party all but disappeared in some Quebec ridings.

Premier Rene Levesque, whose Parti Quebecois ran Robert Bourassa's Liberal government out of office last Nov. 15, said the byelection vote showed the inability of other federal parties to challenge the Liberals in Quebec.

Interviewed during a conference at La Malbaie, Que., Levesque noted the victory in Terrebonne of Roland Comtois, 48, who was trounced by a PQ candidate in the provincial election after resigning as MP to run provincially, but won back his federal seat.

The body of the driver was trapped in the wreckage.

RCMP said the truck, loaded with empty beer bottles, crossed a road, rode along a concrete divider, tore out poles and power lines and plunged into the ravine.

Bus Fare Hike 'Slap in Face'

B.C. Ferries Corporation director Graeme Roberts said today the decision by Pacific Stage Lines to increase their bus fares 50 cents on the day the ferry rates went down one dollar is "a slap in the face to the travelling public."

Roberts said he will ask questions at the ferry board meeting next week to find out why one government transportation service was raising rates while another was lowering them.

"There is a lack of co-ordination here that concerns me. The premier publicly announces a reduction in the ferry rates and then the bus company quietly raises its rates by 50 cents, which cut the value of the reduction."

A one dollar reduction in ferry rates would have reduced the cost of a Victoria-Vancouver bus ride to $5.25 on June 1 but the 50-cent bus fare increase raises this to $5.75.

In Nanaimo, the home city of Roberts, the cost of a trip from Vancouver to Nanaimo was scheduled to be reduced to $3.95 on June 1 but will, in fact, be $4.45 because of the 50-cent increase in the bus fare.

"This bus fare increase came as a complete surprise to me. We had worked many months for a reduction in the ferry rates and then they raise the bus fares on us."

He said the B.C. Ferry Corporation board of directors could not lodge an official protest because the bus service is outside its terms of reference.

"But we can ask questions. Especially about the lack of co-ordination between government departments."

Roberts said another item certain to be on the agenda for next week's meeting (the date has not been set) is the quality of food on the ferries.

The main problem, he said, is a lack of variety on the menu. There has been some improvement in the service in the past month but there is a long way to go, he said.

The ferry cafeteria has produced a continuing flood of complaints, he said.

Roberts, who had urged the fare for car and driver be reduced to $10.50 from $14, said the reduction to $12 is gratifying but not necessarily the end.

However, the fare question would not be raised at the board meeting, except as it relates to the bus increase.

U.S. Tourist Boom Seen for Victoria

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

"Victoria is going to get a whole lot of tourists this summer," predicts the executive vice president of the Portland Chamber of Commerce and director of the tourist bureau.

"We have never had so many requests for ferry schedules. It is going to be very busy in Victoria this summer, you can be sure of that," said Oliver Larson.

Larson, in a telephone interview, said the tourist drop last summer was due to a number of factors, none of which are present this year.

"There was the increase in the ferry fares along with the things that were happening down here in Oregon. The economy was bad last year. Nobody wanted to travel very far. Now things are really picking up. I don't know what President Carter has done but I have never seen such mass optimism before. Everybody believes times are getting better."

Officials in Seattle tourist offices also report a flood of inquiries about attractions in Victoria. They project a sharp increase in the flow of visitors to Victoria this summer.

One official of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce estimated the increase could be as high as 15 to 20 per cent, based upon the number of enquiries coming into the chamber office.

Larson said it should come as no surprise that Portlanders are planning to come to Victoria.

"We have taken surveys and Victoria ranks very high as a tourist destination for people in Oregon. In fact, for family trips, Victoria ranks second to California. You know, Disneyland and all that.

"More families go to Victoria than visit Crater Lake Park (which is in Oregon)."

Victoria does not have much of an image as a swinging city, however.

"I must add that Victoria is nowhere on the list for young people. Singles, young couples, the swinging crowd. Their number one choice is San Francisco, followed closely by Las Vegas. If they are going up to Canada they will select Vancouver.

AREA POLICE PLAN LIE DETECTOR UNIT

A police polygraphy section for lie detection will be established in Greater Victoria in six months to a year, Police Chief Jack Gregory informed the Victoria Police Board today.

Gregory did not say under which law enforcement agency the section would be set up and gave no more details of the proposal, which he said had been relayed to him "in a confidential manner."

The board chairman, Mayor Mike Young, welcomed the news. "At the present time a polygraph operator has to be brought over from Vancouver, sometimes by helicopter, and the arrangement is "very expensive," he said.

"I don't think it is unreasonable to suggest that one polygraph operator is needed on Vancouver Island," he said.
